

Israelis urge Palestinian state

MILAN, Italy (R) — Israeli opposition parliamentarians called Saturday for the establishment of a sovereign Palestinian state. At a joint news conference with Palestinian leaders from inside and outside the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, the Israeli deputies said their government should start immediate peace talks with the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO). "The Palestinians should be able to enjoy their national sovereignty and exercise without conditions the right to vote and elect their own representatives," said Shulamit Aloni, president of the Israeli Knesset. "We must build a future in which there will no longer be either occupiers or the occupied," Aloni added. Aloni was among about 30 Israeli, Palestinian, western academics and Jews taking part in a three-day conference in Milan on prospects for Middle East peace. He said conceding autonomy to Palestinians living in the West Bank and Gaza was not enough. "It is a question of forming two distinct states with their own economies," he said.

Jordan Times

An independent Arab political daily published by the Jordan Press Foundation جورديان تايمز يومياً سياسية مستقلة عن المؤسسة الصحفية الأردنية "الراي"

Information minister returns

AMMAN (Petra) — Minister of Culture and Information Nasseh Majali returned home from Cairo Saturday at the conclusion of an official visit to Egypt. During the visit, Majali discussed with President Hosni Mubarak the latest developments in the Palestinian arena, the efforts to find a solution to the Middle East question, and the resumption of parliamentary life in Jordan. He also met with Egyptian Information Minister Safwat Al Sharif and discussed enhancing information cooperation between the two countries and within the framework of the Arab Cooperation Council. Majali also visited a number of Egypt's press and information institutions.

Volume 14 Number 4243

AMMAN SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1989, RABIA THANI 20, 1410

Price: Jordan 100 fils; Syria 1 pound; Lebanon 1 pound; Saudi Arabia 1.50 riyals; UAE 1.50 dirhams; Great Britain 25 pence

Committee set up to study 'economic crime'

By Majid Asfour
Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — The Cabinet, convening Saturday under the chairmanship of Prime Minister Sharif Zeid Ben Shaker, formed a special committee to study the various aspects of "economic crimes." The committee comprises the deputy prime minister and interior minister, the minister of justice, the minister of planning, the minister of finance, the Controller General of the Jordanian Bank, Dr. Jamal Nasser, Sulaiman Al Hadidi, Dr. Fawzi Gharyabeh, Dr. Ahmad Mango, and Dr. Nayef Abdul Rahman.

The formation of the committee stems from the desire to preserve public property and enhance the spirit of legitimate earning in the private and public sectors. The duties entrusted with the committee include conducting a comprehensive survey of legal texts related to economic crimes in legislation, demonstrating aspects of illegitimate practices or those leading to illegitimate earning which the legal texts did not deal with clearly, defining proposals to contain this phenomenon, defining justice apparatus capable of effectively dealing with economic crimes, and presenting other proposals that could lead to a radical solution of grave consequences emanating from economic and financial crimes in the social, financial, and economic fields.

The Cabinet also decided to establish a "development and employment fund" designed to bolster and finance individuals and social establishments whose objective is to launch productive work that ensures further job opportunities and income. The fund will enjoy financial and administrative independence and intended to provide adequate financial supply with easy conditions to individuals and groups so as to start productive projects and job opportunities in all parts of the Kingdom and, enhance projects by providing the necessary technical assistance, financing service projects that bolster productive projects, coordinating activities of institutions functioning in fields related to social productive work so to avoid duality in projects, and to helping institutions develop their capabilities.

The fund will be financed from the treasury, loans, and foreign aid. The fund will be administered by a board of directors consisting of the minister of labour as chairman and the membership and two representatives of voluntary work establishments in addition to the secretary general of the ministries of planning and social development as well as the directors general of the Social Security Corporation and the Vocational Training Corporation.

Mahmoud reappointed

Haider Mahmoud, a former director of the culture and arts department of the Ministry of Culture was Saturday reappointed as cultural advisor at the Prime Ministry. Mahmoud's reappointment came in decision at Saturday's Cabinet meeting. During the same session the Cabinet decided to retire undersecretary of the Ministry of Interior Salem Qudab. No replacement was announced.

Bush briefs Mubarak on talks with Shamir

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush called Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak Friday to discuss the Middle East peace process and brief him on the visit by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, the White House said.

Bush emphasised continued involvement in a search for peace, as the White House Press Secretary said. Bush said he and Mubarak agreed that discussions among the parties will continue.

Shamir met with Bush at the White House Wednesday. Shamir said the talks relieved tensions in U.S.-Israeli relations. "I'm pleased by the progress in arranging peace negotiations," he said.

Shamir, continuing his tough talk on the Middle East conflict, said the Middle East conflict is not a religious one, but a political one. He said the Middle East conflict is not a religious one, but a political one.

Referring to statements by Israeli leaders of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) about a Palestinian state co-existing with Israel, he said: "This kind of talk is not sweet to Western ears. We are not so eager to have peace that we can easily be seduced by it." Shamir did not mention the United States specifically except to say "it would be tragic for both our countries if we allowed propaganda to defeat the prospects of real peace."

During a week-long visit to the United States, the Israeli premier has reiterated his tough stance on peace proposals and accused Washington of wanting to see the Middle East peace so much that it sees the means to that end as of secondary importance.

In a speech to the Los Angeles World Affairs Council Friday, Shamir said his talks with Bush were friendly and productive. But he showed no sign of relaxing his views on key issues separating him and the administration.

On the question of allowing the PLO to be represented at the talks, Shamir said such a step would make another war inevitable. "It would be useless to negotiate about peace with an organisation that opposes peace," he said.

Washington has so far declined to assure Israel that the PLO would not be present at the talks.

S. Africans begin final phase of Namibia pullout

GROUPTONTEIN, Namibia (Agencies) — South African troops began their final withdrawal from Namibia Saturday after 74 years of military occupation.

Shepherded by white United Nations Transition Assistance Group (UNTAG) vans, 106 South African armoured trucks and personnel carriers rumbled south from Grootfontein and Oshana.

Pretoria is obliged under international agreements on Namibia's independence to withdraw the last 1,500 South African troops from the territory by Wednesday.

Grootfontein, once Pretoria's biggest garrison in Namibia and its main military hub, was woken before dawn by the roar of trucks firing up for the 1,000-kilometre journey to the South African border.

But no one turned out to watch the trucks leave in a convoy covering several kilometres of the flat bush country.

"Things are going very well. I am surprised at how cooperative the South Africans have been," Yugoslav Colonel Ismet Malsumic said as he counted the departing trucks.

Malsumic, a member of the 8,000-strong UNTAG contingent monitoring Namibia's independence, said a handful of South African soldiers would remain at the two bases until Monday or Tuesday.

The South African withdrawal marked a new milestone in Namibia's phased transition to independence next year under United Nations supervision.

The country's 23-year bush war with the nationalist South West Africa People's Organisation (SWAPO) ended in July when troops of both sides were confined to bases ahead of pre-independence elections earlier this month.

SWAPO won the most votes in an election for a 72-member constituent assembly that will write a constitution and guide Namibia to full independence.

Salim Al Hoss, who was named by Lebanon's President Rene Muawad as a new prime minister and was entrusted with forming a unity cabinet, pictured in west Beirut returned briefly to his post Saturday to show support for Lebanon's new president.

U.S. ambassador urges Aoun to recognise Muawad

EHDEN, Lebanon (R) — U.S. Ambassador John McCarthy

He told reporters that General Michel Aoun, who is holding out in the Christian enclave, should be a "good soldier" and submit to civilian authority.

McCarthy and his 29 staff evacuated the Beirut embassy Sept. 6 because of fears for their safety during anti-American protests by Aoun's supporters.

He visited Muawad at his home in Ehdén, a village 100 kilometres north of Beirut. Officials said he would present his credentials Sunday.

Aoun denounces Muawad as a Syrian puppet and rejects an internationally-backed plan to end 14 years of civil war by reducing the entrenched powers of Lebanon's Christian minority.

Muawad's wife and about 50 other women cheered McCarthy and his aides as they arrived. "Welcome America, welcome America," they chanted.

But McCarthy told reporters he would not be staying long.

"We will return as soon as our security can be guaranteed... as soon as we are certain we can have free and open contact with all the different political leaders," he said.

"Those are not conditions, those are just the realities," McCarthy said.

"Lebanon has a long tradition of constitutional democracy. In that tradition as far as I know military officers have always followed the civilian authority."

"I would assume that like the good soldier that he is, he (Aoun) will very soon fall in line behind civilian authority," McCarthy said.

Muawad's election by Muslim and Christian members of parliament Nov. 5 gave Lebanon a head of state again after a gap of more than a year.

Aoun holds out because the peace plan does not ensure departure of Syrian troops controlling two-thirds of the country.

Beirut suffered intense artillery bombardments from March to September as Aoun campaigned unsuccessfully for international support to force the Syrians to leave.

"My government has a good deal of respect to General Aoun. We basically agreed with almost all the objectives that he was pursuing," the ambassador said.

"It was really the means he was using that we quarrelled for."

Aoun, meanwhile, showed no sign of bending. "Lebanon is on the verge of disappearance," he warned in a flag day message to Lebanese abroad.

"The democratic and free Lebanon and the model of coexistence is threatened with disintegration and disappearance because of regional autocracy and international silence and external interests."

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz declined to say Saturday whether Iraq recognised Muawad.

"The main problem in Lebanon is not the question of recognition," Aziz said in reply to a question at a news conference.

Most Arab states have recognised Muawad. Iraq has given political and military support to Aoun.

Tough tug-of-war in the offing for House speakership

By Ghadeer Taher
Jordan Times Staff Writer

AMMAN — If the battle to get to the Lower House of Parliament was tough and often bitter for the 80 who made it on Nov. 8, a tougher fight is in the offing as five or six of them for the coveted seat of speaker of the House.

Intensive lobbying, paying personal visits, making promises and entering "deals and understandings" are underway in the capital as well as the governorates in the horse trading ahead of the fateful day on the floor of the domed Parliament House — Nov. 27, the day when the new Parliament will meet and begin its business after the traditional speech from the throne by His Majesty King Hussein.

If figures are any indication to go by, the total number of deputies in the House would appear to be way higher than the actual 80, with each speaker-aspirant claiming he has been guaranteed a certain number of votes.

The top contenders for the speakership span the whole of the political spectrum. Among the most-mentioned names in the race are former Deputy Prime Minister Sulaiman Arar from Maan, Laith Shbeilat from Amman, Youssef Mbaideen from Karak and former ministers Abdullah Nsour from Balqa and Thouqan Hindawi from Irbid, who also served as chief of the Royal Court before resigning to run in the elections.

Mbaideen, 68, the oldest among the 80 deputies, voiced confidence that he stood to secure the speakership after taking over the chair on Nov. 27 to supervise floor proceedings (By law, the oldest deputy serves as temporary speaker until the House elects one).

Mbaideen told the Jordan Times that he was supported by the Muslim Brotherhood, the largest single block in the House with 21 votes, as well as other Islamists and is assured of 35 to 38 votes in the quest to secure 41 votes — an absolute majority.

Contacted by the Jordan Times over the phone, Mbaideen, a lawyer for the past 22 years and former governor of Zarqa, said: "Negotiations are continuing of course, but so far, I have the support of the 21 Muslim Brotherhood, 10 supporters of the Brotherhood and five others."

Arar, who served as speaker of the 1978-1984 National Consultative Council and interior minister in several past governments, expects most of his votes from centrist and liberal parliamentarians and win the tug-of-war despite Mbaideen's apparent confidence.

"I think I will get the majority because I have support from the centrists, liberals and Islamists," Arar told the Jordan Times.

Hussein Mujalli, deputy-elect from Jerash and former president of the Jordan Bar Association, also claimed to have firm backing from all shades of colours in his bid to reach the speakership podium.

"I believe I have a good chance but it is too early to provide figures," Mujalli said. "Things are still brewing."

Besides support from centrists and leftists, Mujalli also asserted he had the backing of Islamist candidates, who are seen by observers as the key to the speakership, which yields wide powers; he calls the House to session and controls the debate in addition to having the final say in setting the agenda.

Contacted by the Jordan Times, Hindawi declined to make any specific comments. "It is too early to say anything," he said. "Things are still developing."

Shbeilat could not be reached Saturday for comment, but sources close to the engineer said he was "in a strong position" to become the speaker. Some observers said indications were that the Muslim Brotherhood, on whose ticket Shbeilat won a seat to the House in the 1984 by-elections, was balking at extending support to the "Islamist" deputy-elect.

Nsour could not be reached for comment.

Abdul Raouf Rawabdeh, former minister and Amman mayor who won a seat from Irbid, denied widespread suggestions that he was in the race for speakership. "I am not a candidate and I have never indicated my desire to be one," he told the Jordan Times.

Most Parliament watchers attach much significance to the shape of things that would emerge from the first round of balloting. If no candidate secures the absolute majority of 41 votes, then the top two scorers are pitted against each other until one of them receives a majority support.

"Since Shbeilat appears to be deprived of Muslim Brotherhood support, the final race could be between Arar and Mbaideen," said a seasoned observer.

Palestinian stoned by settlers dies in hospital

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM (Agencies) — A Palestinian kept alive more than three weeks by a hospital respirator died Saturday of injuries which he suffered when Jewish settlers stoned his car in the occupied West Bank.

In the Gaza Strip, masked unknown assailants hacked to death an Arab woman during the night and residents predicted a fresh wave of attacks on suspected collaborators with Israel.

The Israeli army Saturday ended a four-day curfew imposed on most of the Gaza Strip to aid a search for assailants who killed two soldiers and to quash protests on a holiday.

Relatives said Issa Subeih, 30, was fatally injured by stones Jewish settlers threw at his car in the town in Halhoul, near Hebron, Oct. 24.

Doctors at Jerusalem's Mokasded hospital said Subeih died of head injuries caused by stones. In the occupied West Bank, four Palestinians were wounded by army gunfire and one Arab was shot in a clash with settlers, Arab reporters said.

In the Gaza Strip 10 Palestinians were wounded in clashes with troops. Palestinians said masked youths in the Rafah refugee camp killed Attia Al Najjar, 40, during the night on suspicion she helped the Israeli occupation authorities and for immoral behaviour.

Palestinian activists have attacked at least eight suspected collaborators in Rafah since the beginning of November, killing three.

Gaza residents said they expected more killings because underground leaders of the 23-month-old Palestinian uprising had set Nov. 15 as the deadline for collaborators to repent.

"You are given the chance to repent in the mosques until Nov. 15, the anniversary of the Palestinian independence declaration," said a leaflet issued earlier this month.

"After Nov. 15, the Palestinian people and revolution will decide the fate of collaborators who did not repent."

Israeli authorities tightened control in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip last week to prevent demonstrations on the anniversary of the Palestinian independence declaration in Algiers Nov. 15, 1988.

Troops sealed Gaza Tuesday after assailants ambushed an army jeep, killing one soldier and wounding another.

A ban on all sea traffic from the Gaza Strip, home to nearly 700,000 Palestinians, remained in effect to prevent the gunmen from escaping, an army spokesman said.

But Gaza schools, closed since Tuesday to prevent demonstrations on the independence day, reopened Saturday.

Meanwhile, the army prepared to call up two reserve units of Jewish settlers to serve in the occupied territories, Israel Radio and the independent Maariv daily newspaper reported.

Maariv said the units would begin deployment in early December, with one unit serving in Jericho and the other deployed throughout the West Bank.

Ten days ago a settler unit was called up to patrol the West Bank town of Jericho, Maariv reported. It would be the first settler unit to patrol the West Bank since the uprising began.

The scheduled deployment caused a furor among left-wing legislators, who said units of right-wing settlers could increase violence in the occupied territories.

Critics also said the deployment of the reserve "regional defence units," which in the occupied territories are primarily comprised of settlers, could politicise the army.

An army spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, refused to confirm or deny the reports saying "the army deploys troops on the basis of military considerations."

Regional units have always served in the Gaza Strip and settlers serve in regular army units in the occupied territories.

In Israel, all Jewish men through the age of 54 serve up to 40 days annual reserve duty. Until a spate of settler attacks against Arabs several years ago, settlers often were assigned to reserve duty by their homes.

Clamour for reform grows across Eastern Europe

EAST BERLIN (R) — East Germans set out to enjoy their new freedom and people in Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia took to the streets to demand reforms as Western European leaders gathered to discuss the maelstrom of events in the East Bloc.

Hundreds of thousands of East Germans streamed out of the country for a weekend in the West, storming trains and jamming roads.

In Sofia, 50,000 Bulgarians demonstrated, shouting for free elections and the trial for corruption of ousted hardline leader Todor Zhivkov.

But the cobbled streets of Prague were spattered with blood after riot police and paratroopers smashed the biggest demonstration there for 20 years Friday night (see page 8).

The East German weekend exodus was the second since the breaching of the Berlin Wall and the throwing open of East Germany's border Nov. 9.

Frustrated families sat on rail tracks when authorities ran out of carriages to take them to see relatives and go shopping in West Germany. Others piled into groaning old cars or simply walked.

The Transport Ministry said the situation at some stations was "barely under control" with passengers left behind at several stations.

West German stores did a roaring trade as the visitors spent their 100-mark ($54) "welcome money" handed out on arrival.

The Bonn Interior Ministry said nearly 800,000 people crossed to the West in the 24 hours up to 4 a.m. Saturday, bringing to three million the number of visitors since the border was opened.

Masses more have swept through breaches in the Berlin Wall, where police have stopped counting.

East Germany's new-look coalition government took office eager to regain the disenchanted people's trust with radical economic and political reforms.

But as head of state and Communist Party chief Egon Krenz swore in the 28-member cabinet headed by Prime Minister Hans Modrow, 50,000 people demonstrated in Leipzig for more freedom.

They called on Krenz to quit, saying he and others still in power were too closely associated with the old guard leadership of Erich Honecker, who resigned a month ago.

Eleven posts are held by non-Communists but the key posts of defence, foreign and internal affairs went to Communists.

The demonstration in Sofia, the largest independent rally in 40 years of Communist rule, took place a day after the new reformist Communist Party chief Petar Mladenov replaced Zhivkov as president and said he supported free elections.

The cheering, clapping crowd which packed the central square waved hundreds of banners demanding Soviet-style reform and depicting the disgraced Zhivkov as Adolf Hitler and behind prison bars. Police did not intervene.

In Paris, leaders of the 12 European Community (EC) nations gathered to review the tumultuous events in the East bloc.

They will discuss ways to encourage political and economic reforms with EC funds and technical assistance and are expected to study a proposal by French President Francois Mitterrand for a new European investment bank to finance development projects in reform-minded Eastern states.

Shevardnadze: Malta summit will not be a 'second Yalta'

MOSCOW (Agencies) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Saturday some major agreements could be reached at the Malta summit next month but it would not be a second "Yalta."

Speaking to an association of women journalists in Moscow, Shevardnadze also said Moscow had appealed to the Western allied powers in Berlin and to West Germany not to exploit the situation in the divided city as the wall was opened.

Shevardnadze said U.S. President George Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would discuss both Western and Eastern Europe in shipboard talks off Malta Dec. 2 and 3.

But he rejected suggestions that they intended to carve up Europe in accord similar to those made by Franklin Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin in 1945.

At Soviet troops smashed their way into Berlin at the end of World War II, the wartime leaders divided Europe into zones of influence at a meeting in Yalta, in the Soviet Crimea.

"You can't compare this meeting with Yalta," Shevardnadze said. "It is a different meeting on a different basis of experience, of multi-level dialogue between two leaders."

He prefaced his remarks about Malta by saying he did not wish to quarrel with his spokesman, Gennady Gerasimov, who caused the speculation about a second Yalta by dubbing next month's summit "from Yalta to Malta."

Shevardnadze said no agenda had been prepared for the meeting but "I do not rule out there could be some agreements on global problems" — a reference to terrorism, drug abuse and the environment.

"Naturally we can expect some major agreements... I know the mood of the general secretary (Gorbachev) and I can forecast that it is going to be a very interesting and very useful meeting."

He said Gorbachev sent notes to the heads of government of the Western powers in Berlin — the United States, France and Britain — as well as West Germany as the Berlin Wall was opened last week, appealing to them to help keep the city calm.

"We appealed to them to help preserve order... not to promote destabilisation."

He said the Western leaders had responded "in the same spirit" but gave no details.

Shevardnadze said he thought what was happening in East Germany, including the mass exodus of people to the West since the borders were opened, was "a completely normal process."

"People are leaving the country but as far as I know the absolute majority are coming back. Many of them are curious to have a look at West Berlin and other cities. Some people may stay there but I don't see much tragedy in that," he said.

He noted that there was also increased emigration from the Soviet Union, saying 150,000 Jews had left in the past eight months.

Lebanese ready to give peace a chance but are wary of future

By Simon Martin
Reuters

BEIRUT — Smartly-dressed crowds throng the nightclubs and cinemas, the legendary traffic jams are back and smoked salmon again graces the menu at La Cigale.

At first glance eight weeks of peace or near-peace have transformed the streets of a city battered for six months by mortars, tanks and heavy artillery.

But the sandbags and concrete blast walls are still in place on both sides of Beirut's "green line."

While essential repairs have been done — a shellhole in one block has been converted into a window complete with potted plants — wary Lebanese are waiting before rebuilding in earnest.

"Everybody is waiting to see how things develop," said Gabriel Attalah, general manager of Transorient Bank. "We are in a fog at the moment."

The Lebanese pound is around 420 to the dollar compared with 534 in late-August. Economists see this more as a triumph of hope over experience than a testimony to economic recovery.

"I wouldn't deduce the recovery of the economy from the rising pound," said Fouad Abu Saleh, president of the Association of Lebanese Industrialists. He said one factor boosting the pound could be the return of tens of thousands of people who took refuge overseas from the shelling.

"To recover in a real sense we need entrepreneurs and businessmen to start investing, at least in what's absolutely needed to repair, maintain and serve market needs. I don't think this is happening yet," Abu Saleh told Reuters.

"To recover, the economy needs a little bit more than a lack of shelling. People need to have confidence in stability. After 14 years of war, people are no longer satisfied with peace, especially because this peace seems vulnerable."

"They think there is a question mark over the destiny of the country."

Military chief Michel Aoun, controlling east Beirut and an enclave to the east and north, refuses to recognise new President Rene Muawad and pledges to continue his campaign to expel 33,000 Syrian troops from Lebanon.

Muawad's Prime Minister Selim Hoss is striving against the odds to form a national reconciliation government as stipulated in an Arab-sponsored peace pact.

Abu Saleh said industry was working at 80 per cent of its 1988 capacity since the blockade of the Falangist enclave ended.

"But our equipment is 15 years old and must be modernised or replaced. It will not be very encouraging for the future unless we have bright hope politically in the very, very near future."

"If we have some kind of stability and people have confidence there will be no war for five or ten years, this place will prosper again. I bet on it."

Now, said Abu Saleh, very few people were rebuilding, buying new cars or even new clothes. "They are not spending more money than necessary unless they are very rich."

Attalah said his bank's business financing import/export activity had improved since the blockade ended. "But people are still waiting to see how things develop before going into new business or building up large stocks."

Shops in mainly Muslim west Beirut's Hamra Street displaying winter fashions report good business. Restaurants and nightclubs are open but the mood ranges from caution to pessimism.

"Since the presidential election nothing has changed on the ground," said west Beirut exchange dealer Kassem Ayoub. "I am not buying or investing any money because I don't have confidence in the situation."

Rashid Yassin, another dealer, said gas, fuel and bread was no longer in short supply.

"But the president has to remove the gangsters... the militias. I was robbed three times and my friend was robbed and killed."

A group of west Beirut policemen termed Muawad a fake president imposed by the Syrians and expressed support for Aoun.

"We still have chaos," said one. "The thugs and militia-men are still roaming the streets and we don't dare stop them."

Watch seller Abdo Rabah said a solution was under way and Aoun was the only obstacle. "If the obstacle is removed everything will be sorted out."

"The situation is the same," said Najawa Ezzedine. "Inflation, war, explosions here, explosions there. It is the same story."

Desert war strains Arab Maghreb Union

RABAT (R) — With Savage desert fighting raging in the Western Sahara, Moroccans are wondering what happened to a rosy glow of North African amity that accompanied Friday's birth of the Arab Maghreb Union.

Who is arming the Polisario guerrillas? They ask. What is Algeria up to?

Opposition parties accused Algeria and Mauritania, both partners in the five-nation economic group, of letting guerrillas use their territory.

Algeria, for its part, says Morocco is dragging its feet on a Western Sahara peace settlement.

Mauritania is hardly in a position to police the vast, empty regions adjoining Western Sahara. Its puny army has been massed in the south, facing Senegal, since communal violence on both sides of the border in April.

Nor, at the other end of the Maghreb, is all well between Tunisia and Libya, whose long-standing disputes show no sign of going away.

Diplomats say it adds up to the most serious crisis the Arab Maghreb Union has faced since it was created as an attempt to mirror the European Community on the opposite side of the Mediterranean.

The Union, they say, will stay together because all the region's leaders support the idea. But it is unlikely to show tangible progress in the next 12 months.

The biggest challenge comes from the resumption of fighting by Polisario guerrillas battling Morocco for independence in the former Spanish colony of Western Sahara.

The way to an Arab Maghreb Union (AMU) was cleared in May 1988 when Algeria, long Polisario's main support, agreed to restore diplomatic ties with Morocco ahead of a final settlement of the Sahara issue.

King Hassan ratified a treaty ending old border disputes with Algeria and in January held his first direct talks with a Polisario delegation. A month later the AMU was born at a summit of North African leaders in Marrakesh.

The future of the Western Sahara was left to a referendum to be organised by the United Nations.

Member states agreed "not to tolerate on their territory any activity or movement that could threaten the security or the territorial integrity of another member state."

Because Polisario had its base camps in south west Algeria, analysts and many Moroccans saw the article as the death-knell of the guerrilla front as a fighting force.

The guerrillas now claim to have killed more than 500 Moroccan in four desert battles in the past five weeks. Morocco, calling the attacks murderous and suicidal, reports hundreds of guerrillas killed and 76 of its own troops.

Morocco's main opposition party, Istiqlal, has called for an emergency North African summit to discuss whether the guerrillas are using Algerian and Mauritanian territory.

In Algeria, Al Moujahid, the official organ of the ruling party, said last Saturday that "Morocco seems to turn a deaf ear to the appeals of the international community to enter into talks with the Polisario Front."

It went on to regret a recent speech by the king in which he referred to Polisario members as Moroccan subjects who have "lost their way," although the vote on the territory's status has not yet taken place.

Morocco's relations with Mauritania — the AMU's poorest member — are also strained.

The recent attacks against Moroccan defence lines have all taken place close to Mauritania. Mauritians have accused Morocco of taking a pro-Senegal stand in the row further south. Demonstrations have been organised outside Morocco's embassy in the Mauritanian capital.

In the east, diplomatic sources say, the Tunisians are unhappy about slow progress on joint projects which Libya was meant to finance and the Libyans are unhappy about the reluctance of Tunisia to embark on closer political union.

At a recent democracy seminar in Tunis, Libyan ideologue Ibrahim Abu Khazim, assistant secretary of the General People's Congress, said there were major ideological differences between the two countries.

Turkey fears EC entry problems as East-West barriers fall

ANKARA (R) — Turkey sees no change in NATO's importance as East-West European barriers tumble but believes its drive for full European Community (EC) membership could be hampered, Turkish officials have said.

"The importance of NATO will not be diminished in the medium-term. Also our (Turkey's) geographic situation will remain important," Foreign Ministry spokesman Murat Sungar said.

Other officials said Turkey feared that its 1987 application for full EC membership could be held back. "The EC must decide if there can be a united Europe without Turkey," one said.

Western diplomats said Turkey was concerned that events eventually could dilute a trump card in its ties with the West as defender of a third of NATO's borders with the Warsaw Pact.

Mainly Muslim but secular Turkey, bordering the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Iran, Iraq and Syria, often refers to its NATO membership and strategic geographic location in its desire for integration with the West.

"Turkey has always backed the idea of a politically united and economically strong Europe. It believes countries like Poland and Hungary must be supported in a process of democratisation and European stability," Sungar said.

But he said the EC could not be expected to slow down the process of Turkey's membership by citing uncertainty created by developments in Eastern Europe.

"This would be in keeping neither with fairness or realism," Sungar added.

Turkey is expecting by mid-

December an initial formal answer to its request for EC membership, which has been opposed by some EC parliamentarians on grounds of its problematic economic, poor human rights record and its Muslim and Asian identities.

"The new changes in Europe, could turn out reasonably well for Turkey. There could be more advantages than disadvantages," one diplomat said.

Advantages include Turkey's increasing trade ties with the Soviet Union and its regional ties

U.N. accuses Afghan government, rebels of violating human rights

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Afghanistan's government keeps prisoners penned "like animals" in cells where they await trial, a U.N. investigator said Friday.

U.S.-backed Afghan rebels also are responsible for grave human rights violations, reported Felix Ermacora, a special representative of the U.N. Commission on Human Rights.

He criticised the rebels' use of U.S.-made cluster bombs, and high infant mortality and malnutrition rates among children in rebel-held areas and refugee camps.

Both sides are using weapons against civilians, and "any such use must be qualified as terrorism," he said.

Ermacora visited Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iran in September and October to review human rights conditions and the plight of refugees from the 10-year-old Afghan war.

In Kabul, he found "opponents of the regime are still being tried by special security courts and the procedural guarantees of the accused are not in conformity with international human rights instruments."

The government is still holding more than 3,000 political prisoners in deplorable conditions, he said.

"They are kept like animals in small cells or rooms where they have to stand or squat for an unspecified period of time (often as long as seven months) behind iron bars, often with insufficient light," he said.

Ermacora also accused the rebels of increased human rights violations since Soviet troops completed their withdrawal from Afghanistan in February.

Acts of terrorism (against civilians) — have increased since the withdrawal of the Soviet troops," said Ermacora.

"The city of Kabul is the subject of heavy, daily rocket attacks," he said, citing one example.

Captured Afghan rebels parade in an internment camp run by the Kabul government.

Ermacora criticised the rebels for using U.S.-made cluster bombs "each of which contains 97 smaller time bombs. They constitute one of the most frightening types of weapon currently being used in the conflict."

In rebel-held areas and in their camps in Pakistan, Ermacora "was informed about increasing cases of malnutrition, in particular among the children, due to food shortages."

"Consequently, the mortality rate of infants and children in Afghanistan is very high," said Ermacora.

"For instance, it was stated that 80 per cent of the women and children seeking treatment at the Kuwait hospital for Afghans, in Peshawar, be they from the camps or from inside Afghanistan, are suffering from malnutrition."

Ermacora estimated 5 million

Afghans have become refugees, most in Pakistan or Iran.

The 2.3 million Afghan refugees Iran mostly live in major cities where they are integrated into the population and hold jobs, he said. They are in much better condition than refugees in Pakistan or displaced Afghans still living in their own country, who generally live in overcrowded camps with little opportunity to become self-reliant.

Baghdad proposes Iraq-Iran committee to break deadlock

BAGHDAD (R) — Iraq said Saturday it had proposed setting up a joint committee with Iran to try to negotiate a lasting peace in the Gulf after 15 months of deadlocked negotiations.

Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz told a news conference that under the proposal the committee would meet alternately in Baghdad and Tehran under the auspices of the United Nations.

He said Iraq had made the suggestion to U.N. envoy Jan Eliasson, who took it to Tehran.

Eliasson Friday ended 16 days of shuttling between the two capitals to try to revive talks to end the eight-year conflict that have stalled since a ceasefire in August last year.

"We have not yet received the Iranian response," Aziz said.

Iraq wants priority giving to the dredging of the Shatt Al Arab waterway while Iran insists the question of getting Baghdad's troops out of occupied Iranian territory should be tackled first.

MIDDLE EAST NEWS BRIEFS

Swede found guilty in arms case

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (R) — A Swedish businessman faces up to 27 years in jail and $1 million in fines after he was found guilty of selling arms illegally to Iran. Karl Erik Nissen was convicted of conspiracy, illegally exporting arms and money laundering by a seven-judge federal jury in federal court here. The charges arose from a federal undercover operation in which Nissen and a Canadian husband-and-wife team, Ronald and Eileen Arab, were caught selling parts for F-4C Phantom jets to Iran at the airport here last March. U.S. law prohibits arms trade with Iran.

Tremors shut Tunisian mine

TUNIS (R) — Earth tremors in south east Tunisia forced schools and a phosphate mine to close and the army rushed tents to the area as a precaution, officials said Saturday. They said 11 tremors, measuring between 2.3 and 4.6 on the Richter scale had shaken the area in the last 10 days, causing panic but no damage or casualties. Phosphate mining at Metlaoui halted Friday but might resume next week, a mine official told Reuters by telephone. The mine produces 15,000 tonnes of rock a day and employs 1,500 miners.

2 executed in Mecca

NICOSIA — Two men, a Pakistani and a Saudi national, were beheaded in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, after each being convicted of murder, Saudi television said. The television, monitored in Nicosia, quoted an Interior Ministry statement as saying that "Saudi Amer Ibn Muhammad Al Asnari and Ali Asghar Baktani Bakhsai, a Pakistani, were beheaded in the holy city of Mecca Friday on charges of murder." At least 75 people have been executed by the sword in Saudi Arabia this year according to official statements.

British nurse under investigation in Iraq

BAGHDAD (R) — Iraq is still investigating the case of a British nurse arrested eight weeks ago with a British-based journalist accused of spying, Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz said Saturday. "We informed the British embassy with the involvement of this woman in an espionage affair and she is still under investigation," Aziz told a news conference. Daphne Parish, who works for a private hospital in Baghdad, was arrested in September with Farzad Bazoft, an Iranian-born journalist employed by the Observer Sunday newspaper in Britain.

JORDAN TELEVISION
Tel: 77111-19
PROGRAMME ONE
15:30	Koran
15:40	Programme review
15:45	Children programme
17:10	Football
18:00	News summary in Arabic
18:05	Local programme
18:20	Cultural programme
19:00	Local programme
19:40	Programme review
20:00	News in Arabic
20:30	Arabic series
21:30	Programme review
21:40	Local programme
22:40	Varieties programme
23:00	News summary in Arabic
PROGRAMME TWO
18:00	Loft story
18:05	L'ecole de fin
19:30	News in French
19:45	Silence on Tourne
19:50	News in Hebrew
19:55	Varieties programme
20:00	News in Arabic
20:30	Sorry
21:10	Doc "The Natural World"
22:00	News in English
22:30	Midnight Caller
PRAYER TIMES
04:42	Fajr
06:02	(Sunrise) Dhuhr
11:21	Dhuhr
14:14	'Asr
16:39	Maghrib

JORDAN TIMES DAILY GUIDE AND CALENDAR

with possible scattered showers and winds will be northerly fresh and sea wary.

	Min./max. temp.
Amman	8 / 13
Aqaba	12 / 25
Deserts	6 / 16
Jordan Valley	14 / 20

Yesterday's high temperature: Amman 14, Aqaba 25, Humidity readings: Amman 98 per cent, Aqaba 43 per cent.

USEFUL TELEPHONE NUMBERS

NIGHT DUTY

AMMAN:
Dr. Majed An Saeed	881635
Dr. Salim Al Daboubi	776751
Dr. Adil Dahdoub	893664
Dr. Anafat Al Ashab	602507
Fires pharmacy	661912
Ferdows pharmacy	778336
Al Aswaja pharmacy	637055
Neitrouk pharmacy	623672
Al Salem pharmacy	636730
Yacoub pharmacy	644945
Stamejani pharmacy	637660

JEREB:
Dr. Mohammad Tamm	(-)
Al Shams pharmacy	985236

ZARQA:
Dr. Samir Al Lawzi	(-)
Khalifeh pharmacy	985417

EMERGENCIES

Civil Defence Department	661111
Civil Defence Immediate
Rescue	630441
Civil Defence Emergency	192
Rescue Police	192, 621111, 637777
Fire Brigade	891228
Blood Bank	775121
Highway Police	843402
Traffic Police	896390
Public Security Department	608221
Hotel Complaints	602800
Police Complaints	661176
Water and Sewerage
Complaints	897467
Amman Municipality
Telephone Information	787111
Telephone Information	(directory assistance)
Overseas Calls	121
Central Amman Telephone	010230
Repairs	623101
Abdali Telephone Repairs	661101

Jordan Television	773111
Radio Jordan	774111
Water Authority	680100
Jordan Electricity Authority	815615
Electric Power
Company	636381
RT Flight Information	08-53200
Queen Aila Int. Airport	08-53200

HOSPITALS

AMMAN:
Hassan Medical Centre	813813/32
Khalidi Maternity, J. Amn	642816
Akshid Maternity, J. Amn	642412
Jahid Amman Maternity	642362
Moham. J. Amman	636140
Palatine, Shams	647174
Shamsi Hospital	669131
University Hospital	845845
Al-Manshar Hospital	667277
The Islamic, Abdali	666173/7
Al-Ahli, Abdali	661646
Al-Hadi, Abdali	771013
Al-Basir, J. Ashraf	891611/15
Army, Marja	891611/15
Queen Aila Hospital	602240/50
Amal Hospital	674155
ZARQA:
Zarqa Govt. Hospital	(09)983323
Zarqa National Hospital	(09)991071
Ibn Sina Hospital	(09)986732

JEREB:
Princess Basma Hospital	02/275555
Greek Catholic Hospital	02/27275
Ibn Al Nafies Hospital	02/247100
AQABA:
Princess Haya Hospital	09/314111

FOR THE TRAVELLER

QUEEN ALIA INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

This information is supplied by Royal Jordanian (RJ) information department at the Queen Alia International Airport Tel. (08)53200-5, where it should always be verified.

ARRIVALS

Royal Jordanian (RJ) Flights (Terminal 1)

09:10	Jeddah (RJ)
09:10	Kuwait (RJ)
09:15	Aqaba (RJ)
09:45	Abu Dhabi, Dubai (RJ)
09:55	Doha, Bahrain (RJ)
10:45	Cairo (RJ)
17:20	Paris (RJ)
17:20	Chicago, Vienna (RJ)
17:45	Madrid, Geneva (RJ)
17:55	Brussels, Frankfurt (RJ)

Queen Elizabeth congratulates King

AMMAN (J.T.) — Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth has expressed her deep appreciation for His Majesty King Hussein and wished him good health and happiness on the occasion of his birthday anniversary.

The Jordan News Agency, Petra, said that the Chief of protocol at Buckingham Palace, visited the Jordanian embassy in London and asked the Jordanian ambassador to convey the Queen's greetings and congratulations to King Hussein.

As part of the Kingdom's ongoing celebrations of King Hussein's birthday, a book exhibition was opened at Mu'ta Girls Secondary School. The six-day exhibition, which was opened by Karak Governor Duheiman Al-Zibini, includes books on various sciences.

As a contribution of the Greater Amman Municipality to celebrations of the King's birthday, a photographic exhibition entitled "Amman Today" was opened Saturday at the Royal Cultural Centre. The exhibition, which was opened by Amman Acting Mayor Ismail Armouti, includes photos demonstrating the achievements of the municipality under the reign of King Hussein. The exhibition mounted by Hashim Jweinat, head of the exhibitions department in the municipality.

Also to mark the King's birthday, a children's book exhibition was opened at Al Bair Al Saghir School. The exhibition includes a collection of photos on the life of King Hussein since his childhood. The four-day exhibition is held by the Department of Libraries, Documentation and National Archives, in cooperation with Al Bair Al Saghir School.

Crackdown continues on supply offenders

AMMAN (J.T.) — Fourteen Jordanian merchants were fined by the military court for sums ranging between JD 150 and JD 300 for manipulating food commodity prices or selling food supplies unfit for human consumption, according to a statement released Saturday.

The statement, carried by the Jordan News Agency, Petra, said that one of the convicted merchants, Mohammad Saleh Barakat, was sentenced to one and a half months in prison for storing food supplies unfit for consumption.

The court fined seven other merchants sums ranging between JD 250 and JD 300 for failing to abide by regulations of the Ministry of Supply about grading products they were offering for sale.

The crackdown on merchants who violate Ministry of Supply regulations and hoard foodstuffs and other consumer goods comes in line with a pledge made by the government to ensure that consumer prices are not inflated artificially by traders.

Dozens of merchants have been sentenced to jail or fined in the past months for violating regulations.

Another statement said that the military court fined an Egyptian national, Najdi Diyab, JD 500 for manipulating food supply prices while two other Egyptian nationals were each fined JD 200 for refusing to sell food stuffs.

According to the statement, the court sentenced Khalil Ibrahim Al Yassin, a Syrian national, to seven years in prison and the payment of JD 5,000 for trafficking in hashish.

The military governor endorsed all sentences.

Iraqi musician performs in Amman

IRAQI oud virtuoso Mawir gave a musical concert at the Royal Cultural Centre Saturday. The concert, organised by the National Music Conservatory/Noor Al Hussein Foundation, was attended by Her Majesty Queen Noor, His Royal Highness Prince Hamzah, Iraqi Ambassador Nouri Issa and other officials and members of the diplomatic corps. The Queen also received a gift of Iraqi-made music instruments from the Iraqi Ministry of Culture and Information as part of cooperation between the ministry and Noor Al Hussein Foundation. Also at the Royal Cultural Centre, the orchestra group of Yarmouk University presented a performance attended by His Royal Highness Prince Abdullah. Both music concerts were part of the Kingdom's celebrations of His Majesty King Hussein's birthday.

Meeting focuses on education supervision

AMMAN (Petra) — Delegates from Jordan and other Arab states Saturday attended the first session of a five-day regional symposium on educational supervision at schools, organised by the Amman-based regional office of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) in cooperation with the Ministry of Education.

The participants will study new trends in the work of educational supervisors and review several reports from participating countries on their experience in educational supervision.

In an address to the opening session, Education Minister Adnan Badran, said Jordan considers the educational supervisor as a safety valve for the educational process.

The ministry has worked out programmes for training qualified educationalists to serve as supervisors at Jordan's schools and attracting the best persons for the job by offering proper incentives, Badran said.

The Ministry of Education has completed a two-year period of revision and exploratory work and has embarked on work to overhaul the educational system in the Kingdom in implementation of the first national education conference of 1987, according to Badran.

He said, "the fruit of such efforts will make themselves felt in the 1990s and the country will hopefully be ready for the educational challenges in the coming century."

PSD launches drive to ensure vehicle safety

AMMAN (Petra) — The Public Security Department (PSD) Saturday announced a month-long campaign by the Traffic Department in various governorates to ensure that all vehicles in use in Jordan are in good working condition.

The campaign, which begins Saturday, Nov. 25, aims to ensure that all tyres and lights fitted in the vehicles are in good shape and serve their purpose so as to minimise the number of road accidents during the winter season, a PSD statement said. It urged all motorists to take extra precaution in driving, specially in rainy weather and to avoid excessive speed.

PSD Director General Fadel Al Fuhaid has pledged all out cooperation with the Jordanian Society for the Prevention of Road Accidents noting that close and concerted efforts on both sides were essential to reduce human and material losses on roads.

A two-day seminar was held in Amman recently on means to contain traffic problems in Jordan. Appeals were made during the seminar for close cooperation between the private and public organisations in the country to reduce the number of road accidents.

Hazardous waste talks open today

By a Jordan Times Staff Writer

AMMAN — A five-day regional consultation meeting on "control and disposal of hazardous waste" opens in Amman Sunday with the participation of delegates from 11 countries including Jordan.

The seminar, which is organised by the Amman-based Centre for Environmental Health Activities (CEHA), is expected to review problems related to the increase in the amount of waste material, which is being stored, transported or disposed off in the country, and ways of controlling such processes in a manner that would ensure public safety, according to a statement by CEHA, which is a regional branch office affiliated to the World Health Organisation (WHO).

The participants, CEHA said in the statement, are all heads of departments in their own countries in charge of environment and public health matters and issues concerning industrial waste.

It said that the participants come from Egypt, Iraq, Iran, Jordan, Tunisia, Kuwait, Lebanon, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Sudan and Syria.

According to CEHA officials, WHO scientists and experts from a number of countries will also take part in the meeting.

CEHA just concluded a four-day regional workshop on development of chemical safety protection attended by delegates from seven countries in the Arab World, including Jordan.

Delegates in the workshop, CEHA officials said, reviewed a series of problems related to chemical safety and issued a set of recommendations about precautionary measures that should be taken on the national level to control and minimise dangers resulting from the use of poisonous chemicals. Delegates from Egypt, Iraq, Kuwait, Sudan, Tunisia, and Morocco took part in the workshop.

Amman meeting to discuss needs of disabled persons in ESCWA region

AMMAN (J.T.) — The United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA), in collaboration with the United Nations Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs and the Regional Bureau of the Middle East Committee for the Blind, is holding a conference on capabilities and needs of disabled persons in the ESCWA region, at Amman, from Nov. 20 to 28, 1989. Her Majesty Queen Noor Al Hussein will open the conference. His Royal Highness Prince Ra'd Ibn Zaid will open a sports competition of disabled persons, which is scheduled to be held on Nov. 24, 1989, as a component of the conference.

ESCWA Under-Secretary-General of the United Nations and ESCWA executive secretary Tayseer Abdul Jaber will attend the opening of the conference and deliver a speech.

The conference is specifically aimed at providing a forum for experts to meet and exchange information on disability issues and to recommend specific activities and programmes in the framework of a regional plan of action for implementation by the various organisations of disabled persons in the region, a U.N. statement said. The general objective of the conference is to promote disability-related national, regional and international technical-cooperation activities and the sharing of resources for purposes of personnel training, exchange of information, and policy and programme development and research, it said.

The General Assembly proclaimed 1981 the International Year of Disabled Persons. The important outcome of the International Year of Disabled Persons was the World Programme of Action concerning Disabled Persons. The World Programme of Action is based on the principles of human rights, full participation, integration into society and equalisation of opportunities. It contains a set of guidelines for national, regional and international action.

The General Assembly also proclaimed the period of 1983-1992 as the United Nations Decade of Disabled Persons. The decade provides a time-frame for governments to commit themselves to intensify their efforts to improve the living conditions of their disabled citizens.

At the regional level, ESCWA convened the 1st meeting of the ESCWA inter-organisational task force on disability, which took place at Amman in 1987. It adopted guidelines for future activities in the ESCWA region in the form of a "framework for regional activities." The establishment of the task force and its subsequent activities became part of the major work of the United Nations on disability issue for the region, with a five-year span to coincide with the second half of the United Nations Decade of Disabled Persons which will end in 1992.

The Amman conference is sponsored by ESCWA, the United Nations Centre for Social Development and Humanitarian Affairs, the Arab Gulf Programme for the United Nations Development Organisations, the regional bureau of the Middle East Committee for the Welfare of the Blind, the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries Fund and the government of the Netherlands.

The conference will be convened in the context of the decade and the implementation of the World Programme of Action. It will be attended by some 120 experts, including representatives from the United Nations bodies and agencies, official government delegates, representatives of non-governmental organisations, mass media experts and some eminent personalities in the region. It is notable that some of the participants are themselves disabled.

The conference includes the following major activities:

- (a) Substantive presentations and discussions in the form of formal working sessions covering major subjects on disability.
- (b) Exhibition by some 15 companies of the latest technologies designed for disabled persons.
- (c) In addition, a series of cultural and sports events will be held by disabled persons. A concert by the Egyptian Al Amal Wal Noor Orchestra, at the Royal Cultural Centre Tuesday, Nov. 21, at 8:30 p.m. and also, a concert by the band of blind girls from the Regional Centre for Blind Girls, at the Inter-Continental Hotel, Amman on Nov. 22, during the official dinner. Sports day of disabled athletes will take place on Nov. 24, 1989.

Arab Thought Forum organises symposium to mark French leader's 100th birthday

Jordan pays tribute to de Gaulle's Arab policy

AMMAN (J.T.) — A two-day seminar on the late French President Charles de Gaulle and the Arab World Saturday highlighted the French leader's "well-balanced" policies in dealing with the Arabs and the Middle East conflict.

An address by His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan delivered on his behalf by Dr. Khalil Al Salem at the opening session shed light on de Gaulle's life as a soldier, statesman and World War II hero who led his countrymen in the resistance against Nazi Germany.

"We would like to express the Arab Nation's appreciation to the great man and his people and nation for their great service to humanity over the ages and would like to voice deep satisfaction with Franco-Arab relations which have been bolstered since de Gaulle came to power in France," the Crown Prince said in his address.

The meeting, which is organised by the Amman-based Arab Thought Forum (ATF), focuses attention on de Gaulle on the occasion of the French leader's 100th birthday. Arab and French scholars taking part in the meeting will discuss liberation wars, de Gaulle and people's rights, de Gaulle's views on the Middle East conflict 1967-1969, Jamal Abdul Nasser and de Gaulle, Europe and Egypt, de Gaulle and Lebanon's independence and de Gaulle and relations with Syria, according to an ATF statement.

"Arab-French relations began to develop the moment de Gaulle came to power in France in the 1950s and the Arab Nation will never forget de Gaulle's stand with regard to Israel's aggression on the Arab World in 1967 when he condemned Israel's occupation of Arab land and called for an immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from occupied territories," Prince Hassan said.

"Thanks to de Gaulle," the Prince said, "an era of Arab hostility towards France for its colonial rule in parts of the Arab World and its repressive rule in Algeria was eliminated and the Arab Nation now maintains very strong ties with Paris."

The Arab Nation, Prince Hassan continued, "can never forget the noble attitude of de Gaulle with regard to the Algerian revolution and his call for granting independence to the Algerian people."

"Perhaps de Gaulle's long military service in Syria and Lebanon and his experience with Nazi atrocities in his own country played a significant role in influencing his ideas about the right of people to independence and freedom."

Prince Hassan said the late French army general had led his countrymen in their resistance and armed struggle against Nazi Germany until liberation was achieved.

Furthermore, de Gaulle was a true believer in European unity and was the first world statesman to predict the near unity move which will be taking place in Europe in 1992," Prince Hassan said.

He also referred to de Gaulle's vision of a Europe unified from "France to the Urals," a statement translated by Mikhail Gorbachev in Paris into "the united European home," a "statement which clearly predicted the current developments in Europe and the move towards unity between Eastern and Western European countries."

"France has the right to be proud of the wise leadership of de Gaulle and the Arab World can only express appreciation of the French leader's great endeavours in support of the cause of freedom," Prince Hassan said.

Egyptian Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Esmat Abdul Meguid, in an address at the opening session, referred to de Gaulle's call for "a united Europe with an independent policy" and his call on France to help Third World nations as part of a humanitarian effort that would boost the cause of peace.

Abdul Meguid, whose address was delivered on his behalf by Egyptian Ambassador to Jordan Ihab Muqbil, reviewed Franco-Arab relations since 1958 when de Gaulle decided to terminate France's special relationship with Israel and restore historic ties with the Arab World.

"De Gaulle warned the Israelis against pursuing their aggressive policies and condemned the Jewish state's occupation of Arab territory and its subsequent acts of aggression on various Arab countries," Abdul Meguid said.

De Gaulle was one of the first European statesmen to urge Israel to recognise the rights of the Palestinian people and to end its occupation of Palestinian land, the Egyptian foreign minister noted.

French Ambassador to Jordan Denis Bauchard addressed the opening session with praise for ATF efforts to project de Gaulle's role in cementing Franco-Arab ties and France's support for just Arab causes.

The ambassador reviewed France's stand with regard to Israel's occupation of Arab land and de Gaulle's repeated calls for recognition of Palestinian rights and withdrawal of Israeli forces from occupied Arab lands. The ambassador reaffirmed France's strong support for the idea of an international conference to bring peace to the Middle East based on United Nations Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338.

Following the inaugural speeches, the conference began the first working session during which the delegates reviewed a working paper by Basel Yousef from Iraq entitled "Charles de Gaulle and world people's rights."

The paper highlighted de Gaulle's stand vis-a-vis the rights of people under colonial rule and the French leader's political career. The paper also shed more light on de Gaulle's stand with regard to Israel's 1967 aggression on the Arab World and the French leader's own experiences in resisting German occupation of France during World War II.

Seminar reviews tribal justice

AMMAN (J.T.) — A three-day seminar on tribal norms in relation to Islamic and civil laws in Jordan was opened at the University of Jordan Saturday. Dr. Adnan Al Bakhit, the university's vice-president for scientific research, told the opening session that several working papers on tribal justice in Jordan and tribal customs concerning killings, immoral behaviour and arbitration of tribal disputes would be tackled by the participants.

Panel gives green light for Dome of Rock Project

AMMAN (J.T.) — A committee in charge of the restoration of the Dome of the Rock in Arab Jerusalem Saturday gave the go-ahead for the implementation of a project which entails the replacement of the aluminium cover on the dome with brass sheets.

A statement, issued after a committee meeting chaired by Chief Islamic Justice Mohammad Mheilan said that a resident engineer in Jerusalem has been commissioned to contact the company which was awarded a tender to embark on preparatory work for the JD 2 million project. The Jordanian government is financing the project in implementation of directives by His Majesty King Hussein, according to the statement. The committee has allocated the required sum for the project and a date has been fixed for the commencement of the work.

The work on the outside of the Dome of the Rock followed four years of work on the interior parts of the shrine, including restoration of the Saladin Pavilion, which was burnt deliberately by Jewish extremists in 1968.

Jordan had sought help from a number of Islamic countries and launched a campaign to raise funds for the interior restoration work.

The committee has carried out other important restoration work at the Al Haram Al Sharif, which embodies the Dome of the Rock and the Al Aqsa Mosque, the third holiest shrine in Islam.

The committee last year organised an exhibition at the King Abdullah Ibn Al Hussein Mosque in Amman to display the various stages of restoration work at the holy shrine in Jerusalem.

Swedish king, queen thank hotel staff

AMMAN (J.T.) — As a token of gratitude to the great efforts and fine services, Majeed Khalil, general manager of Hotel Jordan Inter-Continental, received a gift on behalf of Their Majesties King Carl Gustav and Queen Silvia of Sweden presented by Mr. Lars Lonnback, Swedish ambassador to Jordan (photo above), expressing their appreciation to the management and staff of the hotel for organising the royal reception that they held recently in honour of Their Majesties King Hussein and Queen Noor at the hotel during their official visit to Jordan.

The Swedish ambassador expressed his thanks for the special care and hospitality given by the management and staff of the hotel to the official delegation accompanying Their Majesties during their stay at the hotel.

WHAT'S GOING ON

The following listings are compiled from monthly bulletins and the daily Arabic press. Readers are advised to verify the listed time and place with the concerned institutions.

EXHIBITIONS

- * A book exhibition at the Royal Cultural Centre.
- * An art exhibition by Jordanian artists Samia Bourini and Akh Al-Jadeh at Alia Art Gallery.
- * An art exhibition entitled "The Blue Rider" at the Goethe Institute.
- * A photographic exhibition entitled "Amman Today" at the Royal Cultural Centre.

FILM

- * A feature film entitled "Bird" at the Royal Cultural Centre — 7:00 p.m.

Jordan Times

An independent Arab political daily published in English by the Jordan Press Foundation
Established 1975

جوردان تايمز مؤسسة صحفية مستقلة تصدر بالإنجليزية عن المؤسسة الصحفية الأردنية

Editorial Dir: or:

RAKAN AL MAJALI

Director General:

DR. RADI AL WAQFI

Editor-in-Chief:

DR. WALEED M. SADI

Editorial and advertising offices:

Jordan Press Foundation,
University Road, P.O. Box 6710, Amman, Jordan.

Telephones: 667171-6, 670141-4, 684311, 684366

Telex: 21497 ALRAI JO

Facsimile: 661242

The Jordan Times is published daily except Fridays.
Subscription and advertising rates are available from the Jordan Times Advertising Department.

Sunday's Economic Pulse

TWO years ago, imported goods and services, including raw materials and capital goods, used to account for around 50 per cent of the total public and private expenditure on both consumption and capital formation.

Under circumstances like these inflation becomes extremely sensitive to the exchange rate of the dinar. In theory, and in a static situation, every 10 per cent rise in the exchange rate of the dollar against the dinar should cause a 5 per cent rise in average prices. The influence of exchange rate fluctuations on inflation rate is thus partial.

In fact, the near absolute stability of the dinar against SDR's during the seventies did not prevent double-digit inflation figures in Jordan, exceeding 17 per cent in certain years.

If inflation followed exchange rate in a mechanical manner, it would have topped 82 per cent in the past twelve months in response to an effective devaluation of the dinar against the dollar by 45 per cent, which is equal to saying that the dollar price in dinar terms rose by 82 per cent. What followed was a rise in the cost of living by only 31 per cent, or less than two fifths of the rise in foreign exchange rate. This is almost the same new ratio of imported content of the aggregate expenditure after the substantial reduction of imports resulting from the crisis and the devaluation.

Inflation in 1990

There is no doubt that the local prices of some imported items rose by 82 per cent or more, but other prices either remained constant or rose at a lower rate. What we refer to here is the overall average of prices, as felt by a limited income family.

In measuring inflation rate we should identify, and exclude, the one time shift resulting from the devaluation of the dinar. Inflation is a continuous and persistent push of prices up. Therefore the 31 per cent inflation in the past 12 months is by no means the continuous inflation rate. Therefore it is not expected to continue in the coming 12 months, assuming reasonable stability of the exchange rate of the dinar. Inflation rate in the coming year will definitely be less, and the indicators show that, it may not be much higher than 12 per cent in 1990.

As a matter of fact, inflation rate has already subsided since the stability of the dinar was restored and expectations became more favourable.

The latest cost of living index, compiled by the Department of Statistics, shows that prices were jumping at an average of 2.3 per cent a month for twelve months until August 1989. In last September however, inflation rate was slashed to only one third, or 0.8 per cent. This is equal to an annual rate of 9.6 per cent only. This is of course a very moderate rate of inflation, which is not different from the inflation rate prevailing elsewhere in the world.

The IMF experts, who surveyed the Jordanian economy, expected inflation to be around 14 per cent in 1989 i.e., since January. It is more likely that the actual rate of inflation in 1989 will exceed this forecast figure but not by a wide margin, as part of the inflation took place during the last quarter of 1988.

It is only reasonable to expect a measure of stability in the coming year, after the shock that took place in the later part of 1988 and the first part of 1989.

Shamir says it all

ISRAELI Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's visit to the U.S. was the latest occasion for Tel Aviv to confirm once again three cardinal principles of its policies: Israel will never withdraw from the occupied territories; the peace process has a long way to go; and the essence of the Middle East conflict is the continued state of war between Israel and the neighbouring Arab countries. There is nothing really new in these revelations as all informed observers have long suspected that the assertions made by Shamir in the U.S. reflect faithfully and accurately the inner thoughts of the Israeli establishment. What is striking about them is that they were made in the U.S. itself and followed Shamir's talks with U.S. President George Bush. The implications therefore are ominous, the least of which is that even Bush himself was unable to change Shamir's strategy towards the Palestinian conflict.

As for Shamir's assertions that his government has no intention whatsoever of ever withdrawing from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, informed Arabs have long believed that that is the true Israeli position. After more than two decades of initiatives and efforts to get Israel withdraw from the Arab territories it occupied in the 1967 war, Arabs of all walks of life have become convinced that there is no peaceful way left to achieve the liberation of those territories. It has got to the point where one has to be very naive to ever think that that is still probable.

And that the stalled peace process has a long way to go, as Shamir assured his audiences in the U.S., fits in perfectly well with his long established tactics to delay and procrastinate the search for peace for as long as humanly possible. In fact Shamir said so in so many words on many occasions, and this latest confirmation of the obvious comes only as an added evidence that he has only one thing on his mind and that is to kill off the quest for a reasonable settlement of the Palestinian conflict by foot-dragging it till the bitter end.

Shamir's diagnosis that the heart of the matter in the Middle East is the continuation of the state of war between Israel and the neighbouring Arab countries also fits in perfectly well with his rejection of the Palestinian party as a primary interlocutor in the peace process, which in turn explains his total rejection of the PLO as a necessary party in any meaningful negotiations leading to the resolution of the Palestinian case. What is beyond comprehension is Shamir's total blindness to the fact that Arab countries' involvement in wars with Israel throughout the past four decades were in the first place due to the denial of the Palestinian rights and usurpation of their territories. Now Shamir seeks to pretend that the cart comes before the horse and that the settlement of the Middle East conflicts must proceed backward starting with the Arab countries rather than forward through the primary party in the Arab-Israeli conflicts, namely the Palestinians. How can Washington succeed in putting some sense in Shamir's lopsided logic is uppermost on the mind of the international community, which has concluded a long time ago that the essence of the broader Arab-Israeli conflict is the Palestinian conflict which must be addressed and resolved in the most direct manner through direct negotiations with the Palestinian people themselves.

No, Mr. Shamir, the Arab governments got involved in armed conflicts with your country because of the Palestinian case. Otherwise they had no immediate conflict with Israel. So, if Tel Aviv wants peace with the Arab capitals, it must do so through the resolution of the Palestinian case by negotiating with the Palestinian side. Then, and only then, could Israel sue for peace with the Arab countries. And the sooner Israel stops its foot-dragging in dealing with the Palestinians the sooner it can settle its conflicts with the Arab countries as a whole. But this is getting to be rather academic. With the Israeli assurances that it will never leave the West Bank and Gaza Strip one wonders why time and energy are still being invested in the pursuit of a peaceful resolution of the Palestinian case.

JORDAN PRESS EDITORIALS

Al Ra'i Arabic daily on Saturday discussed the Middle East question in the light of Yitzhak Shamir's rejection of the American peace plan, and his declaration that Israeli withdrawal from the occupied Arab territories constitutes a suicide for Israel. The paper said with this statement, Shamir has thus killed the Baker five-point peace proposal, and with his adamant position about the withdrawal, he has thus frustrated all hopes that peace can be achieved through Washington's ideas. It is now up to the United States to muster enough courage and declare its acceptance of the international conference idea, something which it has chosen to avoid so far, in order to deal with the situation, said Al Ra'i. In view of this development, said the paper, the European nations should now step in to end the deadlock, and help breathe life again into the Middle East peace process, and secure a withdrawal of Israeli forces from the occupied lands in exchange for peace with the Arabs. It noted that Shamir's outright rejection of peace was bound to invite further violence in the Middle East, a development that would not be welcomed by Europe or the United States.

Sawt Al Shaab daily said that the PLO's call on the Arab League to convene an extraordinary session is a step in the right direction. The Arab countries should be fully informed on the outcome of the slow-paced talks going on between the PLO and the U.S. on the peace process in general and the election proposal in particular, said the paper. It noted that the U.S. and the PLO have reached nowhere in their contacts held in Tunis, and the Israeli prime minister is showing more and more intransigence in his position with regard to the peace plan and the future of the occupied Palestinian land. Therefore, it is incumbent on the Arab League to take a defined position and to chart a working plan for the coming stage.

By Theo Sommer

THE Berlin Wall is still there, and so is the fortified border running right down the middle of Germany. But suddenly they seem just relics of a distant past. People dance and prance on top of the wall; and tens of thousands of East Germans, filing past the minefields and man traps, stream into West German border towns. They come for a stroll along West Berlin's Kurfurstendamm or for a beer in Lubek's Ratskeller, shop in bewilderingly well stocked department stores or try their first-ever Big Mac. Then they return home — most of them, at any rate.

We have all hoped and prayed for something like this to happen, yet nobody expected it to happen so soon and so suddenly. In August 1961 Erich Honecker built the wall in order to prevent the collapse of his state; only by sealing the borders could he stop the westward stampede of his citizens. Now, four weeks after Honecker's downfall, his successor, Egon Krenz, pierces the wall in order to avert the breakdown of the GDR, the "Gradually Disappearing Republic"; only by opening the borders can he hope to stop the outburst that has been bleeding East Germany white in recent months.

Cascade of concessions

It is a desperate gamble, but it might just possibly work. Provided, of course, that the new leadership opts for far-reaching reforms: political pluralism, a market-oriented economy and the rule of law. There is presumably still considerable hesitation in the Krenz team about the ultimate wisdom of such a radical reform course; the old guard would prefer to cling to the monopoly of power claimed by the communists as their natural birthright. Yet people will no longer put up with it. Pressure for free elections is building up even within the ruling party. Krenz has gone too far already to back down again. The elementary force of a people that has suddenly been shaken off fear and docility has wrung a cascade of concessions from him in the space of just a few days. It is unlikely to settle for anything less than true democracy. Krenz, if he wants to survive, will have to go all the way. So the wall is tumbling, and the German-German frontier is losing its terror. Does that mean that the reunification of divided Germany is just around the corner?

Frankly, I don't think so. And what's more important: not many people in either Germany think so. The reunification issue, as it were, is the dog that does not bark in the night at this time.

On all the hundreds of banners and posters and placards paraded by millions of demonstrating East Germans in the past few weeks, reunification did not figure once. Nor has the theme been taken up in the scores of opposition manifestoes. Some of them expressly write off the whole idea, outlining instead a humane, efficient, viable socialism in a separate East Germany not alien to West Germany but different from it. In fact, there is room for speculation whether a purified socialism, undogmatic and democratic, might not at long last confer on the East German state two things it never had in 40 years of communist rule: legitimacy and identity.

Nor was there any nationalistic outburst in West Germany. A groundswell of emotion, of joy, of deep satisfaction — yes. But no eruption of chauvinism, no call for Anschluss, no impatient demands to move the German Question to the front burner of world politics. Dutiful, almost embarrassed references in the Bundestag to the constitutional goal of national unity, that was all. And almost every speaker hastened to add that this goal must not be pursued in isolation from West Germany's friends and allies and that unity could be attained only under a European roof.

Generous aid plan

The Germans have become realists. They know that reunification, if it ever comes, will come at the end of a long process that has only just started. They recognise that unity might take many different shapes and forms, and that a loose confederation is a far more likely outcome than Bismarck's empire. And they do not delude themselves that the GDR is likely to vanish from the face of the earth in the near future. At this juncture the most important objective cannot be the disappearance of the German Democratic Republic. It is the reform of East Germany's paleo-Stalinism that must now be accorded priority. Bonn is prepared to spur or reward meaningful reforms by a generous aid plan. Nobody need be afraid that this might put the Federal Republic on the skirts, that it would turn its back on the other East European countries trying to struggle out of oppression and backwardness, or that it could undermine our loyalties to the West.

There are no shortcuts to a solution of the German Problem that would be tolerable to Germans and their neighbours alike. A new German-German relationship in a context of reduced East-West tension must evolve in the larger framework of ending the cold war and making Europe whole and free again. Three historical processes will determine the future order: the progressive integration of Western Europe in a "more perfect union," to borrow a phrase from the U.S. Constitution; the progressive emancipation of Eastern Europe from both Soviet domination and the shackles of Marxism-Leninism; and the progressive re-establishment of their former closeness between the two halves of Europe. The future shape of Europe must be clear before the future shape of Germany can be even divined. Under a common

European roof, both will become thinkable: the German nation united in one free state or divided into two free states — a kind of Austrian solution that Konrad Adenauer first talked about 30 years ago.

This new order is barely visible yet, let alone Germany's place in it. The physical division of Germany is now history; its territorial division is not. What ended last week is the separation of the people, not the partition of the country. The task before us in the period ahead is the reassertion of the German nation rather than the reunification of the two German states. The more quickly freedom is fully established in East Germany, the more easily that task can be mastered. The rest can be safely left to history — Newsweek.

Theo Sommer is editor in chief of Die Zeit.

For West Germans, reunification is not first priority

By Douglas Hamilton

Reuter

EAST BERLIN — For those who spent the past week relaxing on a desert island, here is the news: the world has changed.

On the night of Nov. 9, East Germany's Communist leaders opened the Berlin Wall and told a people penned in for 28 years they were free to come and go. It spelled the end of the cold war era and was a step towards ending the postwar division of Europe.

Events unfolded this way: At a little after 7 p.m. in East Berlin, Communist Party chief spokesman Guenter Schabowski told a news conference East Germans were now free to travel. The news burst like a bombshell upon a world resigned to the Berlin Wall since 1961.

The Communists, on the ropes after weeks of mass protest and an exodus that saw 250,000 mostly young East Germans flee the country, had just kicked out the Stalinites old guard and revamped the politburo, hinting at free elections.

Nobody dreamed they would take the ultimate gamble. "There must be some mistake," said an astonished border guard officer at checkpoint Charlie.

At 9 p.m., in mild weather, East Germans of all ages flocked to the main crossing points after hearing the news on television. "Can it be really true?" everyone asked.

Border officials did not know what to tell them.

Shortly before midnight, a rumour swept the crowd at the Bahnhof Friedrichstrasse exit point — visa stamps would be given out immediately at the state travel office in central East Berlin. Hundreds ran there laughing and screaming. It was true. It was chaos. They streamed over into West Berlin in their thousands, gulping down freedom.

In the West German capital, Bonn, officials braced for the unimaginable. "No one will be turned back," said one. That night, and over the next two days, Berlin witnessed a massive, joyful East-West invasion. Perfect strangers embraced in tears. West Berliners stood on top of the concrete wall cheering and waving.

Two million East Germans, many without visas, set foot on the "other side" in the 48 hours after East Berlin opened the gates.

A million more had followed by nightfall on Monday, creating 60 kilometres border traffic jams. On Nov. 10, visiting West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl broke of a historic reconciliation trip to Poland to rush back to Berlin.

Western leaders and the world's press hailed what was happening the East Germany. The Soviet Union said it approved of the wall's opening. Stock prices on the Frankfurt exchange surged in what dealers called a "Germany rally."

As day dawned in East Berlin, thousands queued patiently for exit and multiple entry visas that belied a generation of mines, attack dogs, watchtowers, barbed wire and machineguns. East German guards began dismantling sections of the wall.

"We are and remain one nation and we belong together," Kohl told a West Berlin rally.

On Sunday, it began to emerge that another political miracle was emerging for East Germans. The vast majority of those who flocked to the West just went to take a look — and came back.

"They have discovered they are a people. They have found a new sense of national identity," a pastor said after thanksgiving in an East Berlin Protestant church.

As East Berliners marvelled at consumer goods in the West, their rulers expelled hardliners from key positions and then agreed to call a special Communist Party congress to consider the party's future.

On Saturday, Nov. 11, East Berliners began streaming through a new hole in the wall at the Potsdamer Platz, as bustling intersection before World War II now overgrown with weeds.

They rode the subway to West Berlin from a long-closed ghost station.

East German authorities said 2.7 million visas had been given out, then 3.4 million, then 4.3 million, then 5.7 million, then a week later, 8.6 million, or more than half the population of 16.6 million.

The mayors of the two halves of Berlin sealed their reunion with a handshake and more crossing points were promised to cope with the human tide.

In West Berlin on Monday, Nov. 13, the Western allied powers admitted the speed of change had taken their governments by surprise. They had assumed that, despite reforms launched by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the wall was a fixture.

In Paris, French President Francois Mitterrand summoned a snap summit of the 12 European Community leaders for Nov. 18.

The East German Volkskammer (parliament) elected a non-Communist speaker in a tight vote — its first secret ballot — and endorsed reformer Hans Modrow as prime minister.

More than half a million people took to the streets of half a dozen East German cities to insist that only free elections would satisfy them.

The pace kept up in other Eastern European countries. Hardline Czechoslovakia on Tuesday announced it too was giving up exit visa requirements.

Overshadowed by the East German drama, Bulgaria's Communist Party had discarded Todor Zhivkov, their leader for 35 years, to join the wave of reform.

On Nov. 14, Modrow opened coalition talks with former "satellite parties," hoping to make genuine allies out of onetime puppets.

On Wednesday, Nov. 15, there was speculation that East Germany was about to breach the wall at the Brandenburg gate, the supreme symbol of German unity — since it lies behind the wall — its division. But the six-column gate remains shut.

Modrow on Thursday won agreement on a coalition deal at the expense of slackening the Communist Party's grip on power, giving 11 posts to non-Communists in a 27-member cabinet committed to radical political and economic reforms.

arming themselves in anticipation of violence.

"We do not trust them. After what has happened maybe they will kill us," said cattle farmer Gert Alberts.

"If SWAPO attacks, we will fight," another farmer, Maais Fourie, told South Africa's Weekly Mail newspaper.

A sign saying "welcome to wit wolve land (welcome to the land of the white wolves)" appeared several weeks ago at the entrance to the conservative northern town of Outjo. It was a reference to a shadowy group of South African white extremists.

For most of South Africa's 74-year rule the administrators it appointed in Windhoek applied apartheid racial segregation and a contract labour system that forced blacks to travel vast distances to work for white under harsh conditions.

Apartheid laws have been abolished but informal separation persists. Most schools and many hospitals are in effect run on segregationist lines.

A growing controversy in the gradual transition to independence sometime next year is a recruiting drive by the white-led police force, seen by many blacks as an instrument of colonialist repression.

The 4,800-strong force charged with keeping order among the 1.3 million population says it is understaffed and needs 2,000 more men in uniform by independence.

Mexico's Salinas confounds critics but walks thin line

By Keith Grant

Reuter

MEXICO CITY — Almost a year into his presidency, Carlos Salinas de Gortari has engineered some momentous changes in Mexican political and economic life but political analysts say his modernising campaign still has far to go.

Salinas has yet to reach a vital debt accord or to conquer inflation, and his political reforms have not freed Mexico from its taint of electoral fraud, they say.

"He may have grabbed the political initiative, leaving his opponents hoping he will stumble, but the benefits so far from privatisation and other programmes have been exaggerated," said political scientist Jorge Castaneda.

Salinas's first state of the nation address on November 1 was heckled, an almost unprecedented ordeal for a Mexican president and in itself a sign of greater freedom.

But in the state of Baja California later the same day, he shared rapturous applause at the swearing-in of Ernesto Ruffio of the centre-right National Action Party (PAN), Ruffio, the first opposition state governor for 60 years, said his election was a challenge for Mexican democracy.

"We are determined to prove that democracy and federalism are compatible," Ruffio said. Salinas has expressed full support for the lone opposition governor.

Centre-left politician Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, who was Salinas's nearest rival in July 1988 elections, criticised the president's speech as self-congratulatory and said his party of the Democratic Revolution (PRD) would try to reverse what it sees as a betrayal of Mexican ideals.

"We will fight to change the present correlation of forces and a political strategy that is neo-liberal, technocrat and imposed from abroad," he said.

But Cardenas has been upstaged by Salinas's rapid-fire reforms which have set the country on a new course.

A decision last month by PAN to support electoral reform proposed by Salinas's Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) and the president's November 1 offer to maintain a political dialogue also wrong-footed Cardenas's PRD, which had walked out of the reform debate.

In his address, Salinas reeled off statistics to back his vision of a modern and successful Mexico, from the 9,000 drug arrests and the jailing of corrupt government and union officials, to the $3 billion in capital repatriation this year.

But economists point out that although more than $2 billion in foreign investment have been registered this year only $562 million actually entered the country, half that in the same period last year. They doubt a restructuring of its $100 billion debt will offset a growing current account deficit.

The biggest danger facing Salinas, political analysts say, is that his economic policy will not bear fruit in time to meet the needs of Mexico's poverty-stricken majority.

"The government's strategy has amounted to a massive subsidy to the middle classes," said Castaneda, who estimates it has cost Mexico $20 billion to stabilise the peso over the past two years. The poor have not prospered and the government has not raised spending on health or education, he says.

The government says the economy is expanding twice as fast as expected this year, but that ironically this success could bring inflation because of economic bottlenecks and returning flight capital which is swelling money supply.

Namibia's whites uneasy about black rule

By William MacLean

Reuter

WINDHOEK — Namibia's minority white are worried about living under a black government newly independent from South Africa. Some are reaching for guns, others hope for reconciliation.

People in the Dutch and German-descended community are openly fearful of persecution if a government of anti-South African SWAPO black nationalists is formed after independence elections.

But many of the 80,000-strong wealthy minority are calling loudly for reconciliation following a bloody 23-year bush war between the South West Africa People's Organisation (SWAPO) and white-led South African forces.

"The vast majority of Namibian white want to stay unless things really go haywire," said mining executive Axel von Gerkach.

"There's a feeling among us of 'let's get it over with, we missed each other around for so many years," said gemstone dealer Willy Preiss, at the counter of his shop on Windhoek's main thoroughfare, Kaiser Street.

"It is high time we forgot the past, where we spoke with guns," said Jorg Heinrichsen, mayor of the tourist town of Swakopmund on the Atlantic coast.

"Bygones are bygones, so if SWAPO wins that will be fine so long as they overcome the atrocities," he said.

Much white anxiety stems from fear of the unknown. While many know black leaders of SWAPO's rival parties, some of which have participated in Pretoria-backed administrations, few are familiar with SWAPO's long-exiled leaders.

The leftist organisation's top men returned from more than two decades' enforced absence only three months ago under a U.N. independence plan.

And the advent of a SWAPO government could be traumatic for conservative whites, especially for the 4,000 farmers in the extensive rural areas. Some are

Were the Jews' best days in Andalus?

WASHINGTON — Jews came to the United States, the first colony of Britain in the New World, as early as 17th century. When the American Revolution occurred under the leadership of George Washington, some Jews stood with Britain. However, the majority supported the revolution.

A large number of them were working in business. For them the revolution had another meaning. The rich and influential Americans opposed the exploitation of them and their country by the rich in Britain.

While the American constitution was being drafted, the Jews put pressure not to mention the Bible and Christianity in it. (Some had demanded a special clause in the constitution to make the country a Christian republic).

The major Jewish migrations to the U.S. were in 1880 and 1930 when about two million Jews entered the country, raising the number of Jews by 1,300 per cent. Most of them came from Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union where a campaign had started against Jews due to their alleged participation in the assassination of Alexander II (the Tsar of Russia). The Orthodox Church was also angry with them and Alexander III raised the slogan that "Jews are killers of Christ."

But the Jews, after settling in America, started suppressing blacks. They had been doing "good" business by selling and buying slaves like any other commodity. Some of these businessmen were Rabbis and religious leaders.

During the first World War there was a campaign against American Jews for siding with Germany (when President Wilson declared war against it). When the wind of socialism and Communism started blowing the region, many Jews were arrested due to their inclinations toward these ideologies.

The Jews who came from Germany and Britain also triggered a campaign against those who came from Eastern Europe. In those days a U.S. newspaper wrote: "American Jews have lost their name and fame. It is essential to prevent the poor Jews of Russia and Eastern Europe from migrating to the country."

It is not a secret among American Jews that one of the reasons which instigated them to ask Jews of Eastern Europe to migrate to Palestine (in the beginning of this century) was to prevent their coming to the United States and thus ensure an adequate labour force for their so-called promised state, Israel.

When the Zionist movement started there was a saying: "the Zionist is a Jew who collects donations from another Jew to send a third Jew to Palestine." It has been reported that once an American Zionist refused to support Jewish migration to the U.S. and said: "Russian Jews do not even deserve bread. Send them to Palestine."

The Balfour Declaration of 1917 had positive repercussions among American Jews. President Wilson opposed the declaration in the beginning. He said the time has not yet come to establish a Jewish state in Palestine. Wilson announced that the accord was against the 14-point formula to solve spiritual problems. But the Zionist leader Haim Weizmann influenced the American High Court Judge Louis Brandys to put pressure on President Wilson.

The judge was successful in his attempt and after a while the president supported the declaration. It is worth mentioning that the only Jewish Congress member in those times Mayer London

Stephen Izak, author of Jews and American Politics said, quoting figures issued in 1968, that of the 21 rich people who had donated to the Democrats, 15 were Jews. The American Jewish Committee says in its annual book that the financial support for Israel and American politicians, who back Israel as well as Jewish organisations, is part of a Jewish social phenomenon.

from New York opposed the declaration and said: "Jews must stop talking about claims of the past. It's ridiculous to talk about promises of the future."

Jews of Europe who brought socialism and Communism with them to New York use their new freedom there to set up labour unions, as well as social and political organisations. In 1914 the first Jewish and socialist representative, Mayer London won the Congress membership. Later, Christians and Jews entered into an alliance to remove him from the post. The Christians opposed him because he was a Jew and a socialist, while Jews expressed animosity for not his becoming a Zionist and rejecting the Balfour Declaration.

In those days there was a small Socialist Party in the United States and most of its supporters were Jews who had migrated from Eastern Europe. The Jews who had migrated from Western European countries, especially from Germany, were richer and more educated as well as supporters of the Republican Party. After some years, supporters of the Socialist Party turned to the Democratic Party. With the increase of Jewish migration from Eastern Europe, the majority of Jews in America became supporters of the Democratic Party.

When Franklin Roosevelt was nominated as presidential candidate by the Democrats in 1932

(he won and continued as president until 1944) the majority of Jews supported him in appreciation of the social changes he had made in his reformation programme. President Harry Truman (1945-52) who succeeded Roosevelt recognised Israel in 1948, following the Jewish support to the Democratic Party.

Roberta Foherlicht, an American Jew and author of several books including The Destiny of Jews, told Al-Majalla, a sister publication of Arab News, that all American Jews are not rich. According to a referendum, conducted 50 years ago, 41 per cent of Americans believe that Jews had fabulous wealth and big influence.

The U.S. business magazine, Fortune, has published a report on the wealth of Jews in order to appease non-Jewish American businessmen who were afraid of the growing Jewish support to the Communist Party.

"Even though all Jews are not, some of them are very rich and influential. The newspapers publish what they want and the White House hears what they say. But nobody will ask who authorised them to talk in the name of Jews," Foherlicht said.

A recent statistical report confirming this opinion, indicated that eight American Jewish organisations were under the control of 28 people and four families had occupied 51 major positions in them. One person alone occupies seven leading posts in seven organisations and his wife holds eight posts in eight organisations.

Dr. Edward Teftan, author of the book, Lobby, also has the same opinion. He asks: "Is it true that American Jews are as strong as they say?" He said the "pro-Israeli Lobby" is a more accurate usage than "Jewish lobby."

The Jewish American millionaire, Jacob Blushtein (who was owner of petroleum companies) was among the forerunners who tried to differentiate between allegiance to America and Israel. He informed Israeli leaders that for the American Jews the United States was their country and told Israel to consider the feelings of Jews living in the U.S. and elsewhere.

Blushtein suggested basing U.S.-Israeli relations on financial support, pressure on White House, foreign ministry, Congress, defusing the anger of majority Christians and showing double allegiance without affecting U.S. national interests. Some 35,000 Jews migrated from the United States soon after the establishment of Israel. Later, 30,000 of them returned.

Another American Jewish millionaire, Abraham Reinberg (owner of a bank in New York), put pressure on President John Kennedy (1960-62) despite the crisis between Jews and Catholics in those days. President Johnson (1962-68) was courted by a number of rich Jews and was on good terms with oil-rich people and bankers in Texas.

President Johnson appointed Arthur Goldberg ambassador to the United Nations and nominated Abraham Fortas for the Supreme Court, selected Wolt Rusto as national security adviser and his brother Yugin Rusto for the State Department. Among the President's non-official advisors were Abraham Reinberg, John Roshti (a Zionist historian) and Arthur Green, director of United Earnest Cinema Co. in Hollywood.

President Richard Nixon (1968-73) came to power and selected Dr. Henry Kissinger, a Jew and Harvard University political science professor, as his adviser. It is reported that the appointment was aimed at improving his image among the Jewish leaders. No sooner had the Jews expressed their aversion toward the then secretary of State William Rogers, then Kissinger was named both secretary of state and adviser. (Jewish leaders had earlier rejected Rogers' Middle East policy).

Apart from Kissinger, Nixon entered into an alliance with a number of wealthy Jews including Max Fischer (millionaire and car merchant in Detroit), Arthur Hertzberg and Jacob Stein (Jewish leaders). The lion's share of the contributions to the Nixon campaign came from Jews. Many Jews criticised the laws enacted by Congress, following the Watergate affair, to limit individual donations to politicians. The Jewish magazine Commentary later admitted that the law "destroyed the strongest weapon used for influencing politicians."

The figures published in those days disclosed that wealthy Jews contributed lavishly to politicians, particularly members of the Democratic Party. These Jews included owners of companies in New York's Wall Street including Goldman, S. Cohn, Lieman, Lob etc. and owners of cinema companies in Hollywood.

Stephen Izak, author of Jews and American Politics said, quoting figures issued in 1968, that of the 21 rich people who had donated to the Democrats, 15 were Jews. The American Jewish Committee says in its annual book that the financial support for Israel and American politicians, who back Israel as well as Jewish organisations, is part of a Jewish social phenomenon.

The reformist Rabbi Kisinder Chandler says: "the reason for the running after money by Jews may be the protection they receive. The Jews have never felt mental satisfaction and relaxation for centuries, not only in Russia but also in Germany and Spain. The days following Islam's victory over Andalus might be the Golden age of Jews." — Arab News.

A historical perspective

Jews came to Britain soon after the Norman invasion when as merchants and cambists they followed the Norman army to the British Isles. However, they were forbidden to practise any other profession in Britain, where they met with suspicion and even outright hatred to the extent that a massacre of Jews took place in York in 1181 with the death of 51 Jews.

The Jewish movement to Europe started after the Muslims and Arabs were defeated in Al Andalus. Consequently they were expelled from Spain and Portugal, where they had been honoured and respected because of Islamic tolerance. There they had enjoyed full civil rights and were employed as consultants. After this defeat, the Jews were compelled to formally bend under Catholic persecution and convert to Christianity, at the same time fulfilling their religious obligations as Jews in secret.

Emigration from Britain and Europe to America began and they were received badly, persecuted and even denied entry. The hatred of Jews by Americans continued up until recent centuries, and in 1940 the American secretary of state refused to allow a ship with Jews on board to enter America, although they had sworn to defend the flag and abide by American laws.

Those who were fortunate enough to have the chance to emigrate to America were badly treated and denied the franchise to vote under the law of 1776. In 1850, a group of citizens led by the police marched on a Jewish residential area, beating the residents and looting their homes. Then, four years later, America signed a treaty with Switzerland prohibiting Jews from settling down or being employed there. General Grant issued a decree to have them expelled from the state to Tennessee and prohibited them from military service. On the other hand, when the Grand Union Hotel prevented Joseph Seligman, a Jewish financier from entering the hotel, Jews boycotted the hotel until the owner, threatened with bankruptcy, was forced to contribute $1,000 to the Jewish fund. The famous librarian, Melville Dewey, published a pamphlet in which he refused to accept any Jewish customers.

With Samlson's law of 1913, all American cinema companies agreed not to produce any film opposing Jews. Furthermore, when Henry Ford published his book called Protocols of Zion Philosophers in the Dearborn independent newspaper, which was about a Jewish conspiracy to dominate America, he faced a court case and was ordered to pay a substantial fine.

American persecution and hostility toward the Jews reached its peak in 1930 during the Great Depression. Jews were very rich, which the average American was living in deprivation. In Germany, the recession led to the formation of the Nazis and systematic persecution of Jews. In 1939, 83 per cent of Americans refused, in a general referendum, to allow Jews permission to immigrate to America. The situation remained as it was up to the 1950's and many Jewish synagogues were set on fire in the South.

In spite of all this, Jews succeeded in securing influential positions and receiving the rights of American citizens. In fact, they entered the fields of journalism, the mass media, the film industry, Congress, the judiciary and legal professions, at a rate that was incredible for their actual numbers in the United States. Their influence on the lives of Americans, domestic and foreign policy, was much greater than any other single community, the more so since they numbered a mere 15 million world-wide.

Just as they had been forced to convert to Christianity to hide their religion, they also began to change their real names. For instance Irving Berlin, the distinguished musician, was really Israel Balcan, Kirk Douglas was Ezra Danielovich, Charles Bronson, the American actor was originally Charles Boshinsky, Isadore Vincin was the original name of A.F. Stone, the writer and journalist, and Joan Rivers, the successful comedian was originally, Joan Molensky.

As far as the Nobel Prize is concerned, 86 Jews have won this prize. — Arab News.

The anatomic solution.

RADO DiaStar

For all your:
Packing,
Air-Freight Forwarding,
Customs Clearance,
Door-to-door Service,
Ticketing and Reservation needs,
please call:
AMIN KAWAR & SONS
Abdel Hamid Sharaf Street
Shmeisani
P.O. Box 7806
Amman, Jordan
Tel. 604676, 604696

CROWN INT'L EST.
packing, shipping,
forwarding, storing,
clearing, door-to-door service
Agents all over the world
Tel: 604090, Fax: 606052
The 2225 BESMCO JO
P.O. Box 528487
AMMAN JORDAN

THE NAME YOU TRUST
TOP QUALITY
HOUSEHOLD APPLIANCES
Electrolux
SHMAISANI AMMAN
TEL 604671

STUDIO HAIG
Professional Quality in 1 Hour Service
Develop your colour film at our shop and get:-
* JUMBO photo
size 30% larger
* Free enlarge- ment 20 x 30 cm
Shmeisani - Opp. Grindlays
Bank. Phone: 604042
Sweifeh tel: 823891

Slide film Processing by Konica
Same Day Service
for all 35 films at Salbashian
Trading Co.
Wadi Saqra str.
Next to Petra Bank
Headquarters
Tel : 633418

مطعم قصر المين
CHINA PALACE RESTAURANT
We proudly serve:
Delicious Chinese and Lebanese cuisine cooked to your liking.
From 12 noon to midnight
All served in the super attractive Chinese decorations complemented by our fine Western band.
Also, enjoy a cocktail or glass of wine at a discount price during happy hours
4-7 daily.
Tel: 60620/Amman, Shmeisani
Opposite Commodore Hotel

TURKISH FOOD YILDIZ Turkish Meze and Delicious Dishes
Open for Lunch &
Dinner
Opp. The Housing Bank & Plaza Hotel
Tel: 672288, home delivery available

AL SABEL HOTEL FLATS
Tel. 630571, P.O.Box 2206
Conveniently located behind the Turkish Embassy in Jabal Amman, 3rd Circle, with easy access to commercial centres and tourist sites.
Ideal for businessmen and visitors alike.
Comfortably furnished suites with self-catering facilities, T.V.
and serviced daily.

RESTAURANT CHINA
The first & best
Chinese Restaurant
in Jordan
1st Circle, Jabal Amman, near Alhiyyah Girls School
Take away is available
Open daily 12:00-3:30
p.m.
6:30-Midnight
Tel. 638968

慕堂餐廳
MANDARIN Chinese Restaurant
The only typical Chinese cuisine in Amman.
Chinese Flaming pot is available
Take away available
Open daily 12:00 - 15:30
18:00 - 23:30
Wadi Saqra Road - near Traffic
Bridge
Amman, Jordan
Tel: 661922

CHEN'S CHINESE RESTAURANT
Mecca Street, Yarmouk
Engineers' Housing
Estate, near Kilo Supermarket
Mongolian Barbeque for Lunch Friday only
Tel: 818214
Come and taste our specialities
Open daily 12:00 - 3:30
p.m.
6:30 - Midnight

CHINESE RESTAURANT
TAIWAN TOURISMO
Authentic Chinese Food
Korean Bar-B-Q
Charcoal Flaming Pot
Take-away service
Open daily Noon - 3:30 p.m.
& 6:30 p.m. - midnight
Location: Near 3rd Circle opposite Aklah Hospital
Tel: 641093

Hashmir Restaurant
FIRST CLASS INDIAN RESTAURANT
Special Executive Luncheons
Take away service available
Open Daily 12:30-3:30 pm
7:30-11:30 pm
After the Philadelphia Hotel
Towards 3rd circle
Tel: 659519 659520

MEXICAN FOOD
Between 1st & 2nd
Circle
Jabal Amman
Tel: 654205
Open For
LUNCH & DINNER

TO ADVERTISE IN THIS SECTION CALL
667171/6-670141/4
Ext. 223

Economy

IMF advises Tunisia to expand liberalisation in banking sector

TUNIS (R) — The International Monetary Fund (IMF) has recommended further liberalisation of banking in Tunisia, including a higher interest rate on funds which banks have a legal obligation to deposit with the central bank.

A report by an IMF mission which visited Tunisia in mid-October said the central bank should abolish or at least loosen controls on the interest rates which commercial banks charge on the loans they make.

Extracts from the report appeared in the weekly magazine Le Maghreb. Economists and diplomats said they were authentic.

It said Tunisia should take further steps to bring foreign banks into the market, encourage banks to be more competitive and reduce the gap between market interest rates and the preferential rates in specific sectors such as agriculture.

On the system which requires commercial banks to support the treasury by investing up to 25 per cent of their deposits in unattractive long-term development bonds, it said:

"The mission recommends the authorities set a timetable for indexing the interest rates on the development bonds to the rates on the money market."

The bonds now carry an interest rate of 8.125 per cent. They are less attractive than other instruments mainly because of tax disadvantages.

The central bank last month started to sell short-term treasury bills which could eventually replace the long-term bonds, provided the banks buy enough of them.

The IMF mission noted that one foreign bank, Citibank New York, had just opened a branch in Tunisia. To persuade others to follow suit "it would be desirable to work out other measures which would lead to present banks to compete with each other more vigorously," it said.

Many foreign bankers are reluctant to move into the Tunisian domestic market because of the central bank's tight control on interest rate margins.

The report said Tunisia failed to meet price liberalisation targets set in September 1987 during negotiations on a structural adjustment programme, which brought the country hundreds of millions of dollars from the IMF and World Bank.

This was because the government was using a different method of calculation than the IMF.

"The mission proposes that the authorities use the weightings agreed in the technical annex (to the adjustment programme)" the report added.

French trade deficit tops 9b francs

PARIS (R) — France's trade deficit widened to 9.33 billion francs ($1.5 billion) in August, its worst monthly performance for 6½ years, the nation's customs office said Friday.

It exceeded market predictions of a gap of between 7.50 and nine billion francs ($1.2 and $1.4 billion) and was a sharp rise on July's 7.48 billion ($1.2 billion) deficit.

The seasonally adjusted figures, normally reported in September, had been delayed by strikes by customs and finance ministry civil servants.

Although it was the worst deficit since a gap of 9.6 billion francs ($1.54 billion) in January 1983, French currency and securities markets took the news calmly.

"It's a very big number but the markets' reaction is very very limited," one senior currency dealer said. "We can't see any deterioration of the franc."

August is the traditional French holiday period and normally a weak month on the external account. August 1988 had a gap of 9.0 billion francs ($1.5 billion).

Official figures showed imports four per cent higher at 103 billion francs ($16.5 billion) in August with exports up 2.25 per cent at 93.6 billion francs ($15 billion).

France's traditional food and agricultural products surplus slipped by about one billion francs ($160 million) from July to 3.54 billion francs ($560 million) in August.

With French companies still strongly importing capital goods to modernise manufacturing equipment, the industrial goods deficit soared 800 million francs ($128 million) to 10.11 billion francs ($1.6 billion) in August.

Economists see lower prime rates in U.S. soon

NEW YORK (R) — While economists say the time has come for U.S. banks to lower their interest rates, many are dragging their feet.

When the trend-setting Southwest Bank of St. Louis and another small bank reduced their prime rates by one-half percentage point to 10 per cent on Nov. 8, analysts predicted that the major banks would follow the regional bank's lead. But so far, only a scattering of small banks have made the move.

The prime rate is the interest rate banks charge small and medium-sized businesses for loans.

Analysts see larger banks delaying in an effort to milk more profits from their lending operations, although inevitably rates are seen coming down.

"Banks are always much more eager to raise rates than cut, but it's going to come," said David Wynn, economist at Data Resources Incorporated.

More signs of a soft economy, a growing gap between banks' cost-of-funds and loan rates, and a belief that the Federal Reserve Board will further lower interest rates should nudge banks to cut their prime rates.

ECONOMIC NEWS BRIEFS

JPC to expand storage facilities

AMMAN (Petra) — The Jordan Ports Corporation (JPC) Saturday signed an agreement with a local company for building a 8,600 square metre storage site and a 1,750 square metre storehouse at a cost of JD136,000. The agreement was signed by JPC Director-General Eid Al Fayez and the director general of the local company.

Cyprus considers tax amendments

NICOSIA (R) — Finance Minister George Symiris has tabled a tax reform package to introduce value added tax (VAT) to Cyprus, amend individual rates and cut the company rate by more than half. Symiris told parliament that introduction of VAT at 10 per cent on some goods and 25 per cent on luxury items was likely to lift prices overall by four per cent. He said the company tax rate would be slashed to 20 per cent from 42.5 per cent. Income tax would be simplified from 11 existing bands to three — 20, 30 and a top rate of 40 per cent compared with the existing maximum of 60 per cent. Symiris said the changes would make the tax system fairer and VAT would help pay for social welfare and development projects. Price rises would be offset by cost of living wage increases. If approved by parliament, the changes are expected to come into effect in 1991. Essential goods and services such as food, medicine, children's clothes, health fees, rents and public transport would be exempt from VAT.

Soviet government buys less crops

MOSCOW (R) — The Soviet government is buying less grain and sugar beet from farmers than last year because of persistent problems with transport and processing. The government newspaper Izvestia said despite what is expected to be a better harvest than last year, sales to the state were lagging behind. Izvestia blamed the shortfall largely on a lack of transport, fuel and processing plants in farming areas. It said problems appeared earlier in the harvest and had not been solved. In a separate report, the main television evening news programme Vremya showed hundreds of bags of sugar beet lying in one farm and said there were no trucks to take them away. It said a nearby processing plant was keeping sacks of sugar in the open because storerooms were full and it could not process the crop as fast as necessary.

Wellcome boosts profits by 28 per cent

LONDON (R) — Strong sales of drugs for AIDS and herpes helped Britain's Wellcome PLC boost profits by 28 per cent in the year to Sept. 30, the pharmaceutical giant has announced. Wellcome said sales of its anti-AIDS drug AZT, also known as Retrovir, rose by nearly half while turnover from anti-herpes drug Zovirax rose by 36 per cent. Pre-tax profits climbed to £282.2 million ($444 million) from £221.2 million ($348 million) last year. Turnover was up 12.6 per cent at £1.41 billion ($2.22 billion). Wellcome, whose biggest market is the United States, said exchange rate fluctuations had helped to boost its results.

THE BETTER HALF. By Harris

"GOD put the leaves down there! I assume HE had a good reason! I'm not gonna move them!"

JUMBLE. THAT SCRAMBLED WORD GAME by Henri Arnold and Bob Lee

Unscramble these four Jumbles, one letter to each square, to form four ordinary words.

SEPOI
MIGRY
INCANE
DIRTOR

Dear, it's your boss
HE WAS SO LAZY HE WOULDN'T EVEN EXERCISE THIS.

Now arrange the circled letters to form the surprise answer, as suggested by the above cartoon.

Answer here:

Yesterday's Jumbles: BERTH GLORY SWINE HOURLY
Answer: What the rodeo performer does in order to impress others—THROWS THE BULL.

Weekly Amman Financial Market trading

AMMAN (J.T.) — The following table summarises trading activities at the Amman Financial Market starting Saturday Nov. 11, '89 and ending Wednesday Nov. 15, '89. (Figures in Jordanian dinars).

Name of company	Number of shares	Volume of trade	Opening price	Closing price	Par value
-----------------	------------------	-----------------	---------------	---------------	-----------

Banking and financial institutions

Industrial Development Bank	26000	42640	1.640	1.640	1.000
Jordan Islamic Bank	3518	8166	2.320	2.320	1.000
Jordan Kuwait Bank	1650	2239	1.390	1.390	1.000
Housing Bank	24298	47435	1.950	1.990	1.000
Arab Jordan Investment Bank	1275	3710	2.830	2.900	1.000
Cairo Amman Bank	207	2898	14.000	14.000	5.000
Bank of Jordan	1910	410413	215.000	213.000	10.000
Arab Bank	38766	97298	2.510	2.510	1.000
Jordan National Bank	1000	3450	3.510	3.450	1.000
Jordan Finance House for Development	1000	3450	3.510	3.450	1.000
Jordan Investment and Finance Bank	1000	3450	3.510	3.450	1.000
National Financial Investments	316518	616667	1.820	1.960	1.000
National Portfolio Securities	—	—	—	—	1.000
Arab Finance Corporation (Jordan)	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Securities Corporation	—	—	—	—	2.000
Real Estate Financing Corporation	250	223	0.940	0.890	1.000
Beit Al Mal Saving & Investment for Housing	—	—	—	—	1.000

Insurance and reinsurance

Middle East Insurance	16127	29370	1.800	1.870	1.000
Jordan French Insurance	4200	10500	2.470	2.500	1.000
Jordan Insurance	—	—	—	—	1.000
Arab Life and Accident Insurance	—	—	—	—	1.000
Yarmouk Insurance and Reinsurance	108	190	1.760	1.760	1.000
Holy Land Insurance	500	725	1.520	1.450	1.000
Philadelphia Insurance	1022	1303	1.220	1.270	1.000
Arab Union International Insurance	1311	2032	1.550	1.550	1.000
Jordan Gulf Insurance	770	1240	1.600	1.610	1.000
General Arabia Insurance	700	1183	1.690	1.690	1.000
National Aliya Insurance	1233	2096	1.700	1.700	1.000
Arab Belgian Insurance and Reinsurance	—	—	—	—	1.000
United Insurance	—	—	—	—	1.000

Services and industries

General Investments	200	278	1.250	1.440	1.000
Inna for Investment and Financial Facilities	—	—	—	—	1.000
Decro for Housing and Investment	363274	363442	1.030	1.030	1.000
Real Estate Investment (Agarco)	12800	7680	0.600	0.600	1.000
Jordan Gulf Real Estate Investment	37095	14460	0.390	0.390	1.000
Petra Enterprises and Leasing Equipments	23500	3995	0.670	0.670	1.000
Equipment Leasing & Maintenance/Tajero	7400	2733	0.870	0.870	1.000
International Contracting & Investment	728	10220	1.400	1.380	1.000
Jordanian Electric Power	413	312	0.800	0.720	1.000
Irbid District Electricity	87326	141890	1.640	1.600	1.000
Arab International Hotels	—	—	—	—	1.000
Hotels and Tourist	—	—	—	—	1.000
United Middle East and Commodity Hotels	1000	4600	4.600	4.600	1.000
Garage Owners Federation Office	91400	252566	2.730	2.710	1.000
Jordan National Shipping Lines	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Press Foundation	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Press and Publishing	—	—	—	—	1.000
Dar Al Shab Press, Printing and Publishing	45637	65093	1.440	1.420	1.000
Jordan Dairy	19962	100720	5.040	5.000	1.000
Arab Pharmaceutical Manufacturing	114100	323813	2.840	2.800	1.000
Intermediate Petrochemical Industries	6975	29425	4.250	4.200	1.000
Jordan Phosphate Mines	110975	281578	2.510	2.510	1.000
Industrial, Commercial and Agricultural (Intaj)	2878	18573	6.400	6.500	1.000
Arab Chemical Detergent Industries	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Kuwait for Agricultural Products	—	—	—	—	1.000
Arab Sweets and Chocolate Manufacturing	120650	419849	3.340	3.450	1.000
Alajin Industries	371554	959109	2.410	2.620	1.000
Arab Aluminium Manufacturing	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Woollen Mills	13650	40890	3.030	3.000	1.000
Jordan Ceramics	2500	7403	2.780	2.950	1.000
Chemical Industries	97724	156306	1.550	1.590	1.000
Jordan Industries and Match (JIMCO)	7275	26945	3.740	3.600	1.000
Dar Al Dawa' for Development and Investment	27886	74561	2.570	2.720	1.000
National Steel Industries	9450	41976	4.450	4.450	1.000
Universal Chemical Industries	—	—	—	—	1.000
General Mining	3259	26037	7.990	8.000	1.000
Jordan Petroleum Refinery	132210	19831	0.150	0.150	1.000
Jordan Lime & Brick	—	—	—	—	1.000
National Industries	—	—	—	—	1.000
Arab Paper Converting and Trading	100	41	0.410	0.410	1.000
Arab Investment and International Trade	20737	11496	0.560	0.560	1.000
Jordan Wooden Industries (JWICO)	27550	94110	3.390	3.380	1.000
Livestock and Poultry	158370	552093	3.420	3.420	1.000
Jordan Pipes Manufacturing	424	2805	6.500	6.540	1.000
Rafid Industrial for Plastic Bags	100850	227266	2.220	2.190	1.000
Jordan Paper and Cardboard	100	90	0.840	0.920	1.000
Jordan Woollen Industries	—	—	—	—	1.000
Trans-Jordan Minerals Research	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Himeh Mineral	—	—	—	—	1.000
Orient Dry Batteries Factory	—	—	—	—	1.000
Woollen Industries	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Tanning	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Printing and Packaging	—	—	—	—	1.000
Jordan Tobacco and Cigarette	—	—	—	—	1.000
Mas Industries	72142	163975	2.270	2.270	1.000
Arab Center for Pharmaceuticals & Chemicals	9912	40531	4.080	4.080	1.000
National Cable & Wire Manufacturing	124101	333026	2.670	2.650	1.000
Jordan Spinning & Weaving	221576	605537	2.660	2.790	1.000
Jordan Sulpho Chemicals	52587	52708	1.000	0.990	1.000
Jordan Cement Industries	72650	98318	1.370	1.340	1.000
Jordan Precast Concrete Industry	85960	51944	0.630	0.600	1.000
Grand total	3,107,238	6,912,023

E. Germany announces stunning new policies

EAST BERLIN (R) — In a stunning rejection of the rigid centrally planned communist economy, East Germany said Friday it would try to get the best out of capitalism while remaining committed to "socialism with a human face."

Reformist Prime Minister Hans Modrow told parliament he wanted, in effect, to create a planned market economy.

Taxes and bureaucracy would be cut, joint ventures allowed, foreign trade and private enterprise liberalised, he said.

"Only an economically stronger state can do something for its citizens," Modrow said, unstinting in his criticism of 40 years of economic mismanagement.

But any thoughts of East Germans treading in the capitalist footsteps of their rich cousins to the West seemed hasty.

"Socialism is not up for grabs," Manfred Gerlach, leader of the East Germany's small Liberal Democrat Party, told parliament.

Modrow, a reformist member of the Communist Party Politburo who was elected prime minister by parliament Monday, had earlier Friday proposed to the house a five-party coalition of 28 ministers, including himself, for approval.

In commenting on the economy, he said: "Economic reform does not mean scrapping planning. Life points us towards a socialist system in which planning and the market are closely linked."

But Western economists remained unconvinced that life alone would solve the conflict between planning and the opening up of the system which they say is needed to stimulate the economy.

"An economic opening means the East German economy has to be made internationally competitive," said Peter Pietsch, chief economist for West Germany's Commerzbank in Frankfurt.

"It will be a long, thorny route before East Germany is 100 per cent competitive by Western standards," Pietsch added.

Perhaps the biggest issue, he said, was the convertibility of the East German mark. Like all communist bloc currencies, it is not readily convertible.

Although 40 years of incentives rule and a lack of incentives have stifled the East German economy, it is still known as the workhorse of the communist world.

A diligent workforce and some strong industries, such as petrochemicals, machine tools, agriculture, optics, glass and ceramics, have made East Germany communism's leading economy.

"The substance of our people's economy is powerful enough to withstand a stabilisation in the foreseeable future," Modrow said. "This government will only make promises that it is sure it can keep."

Strong trade links with West Germany have also helped and East Germany can export goods duty-free to the European Community because Bonn does not recognise East Germany as a separate country for foreign trade.

But there is a severe shortage of decent housing and basic consumer goods for the country's 16.6 million people.

East Germany is heavily dependent on foreign trade, which accounts for around 30 per cent of national income.

It has always said that it runs a foreign trade surplus — but Friday Modrow said improvements in the trade balance were crucial, perhaps even "a question of survival."

The new minister for foreign economic relations could not be congratulated in parliament Friday — he was already in Tokyo. Modrow is a fan of Japanese economic efficiency.

Modrow's new government also includes a new post, that of economics minister. He has replaced some of the old men who used to run the economy with three women, all in economic posts.

The economic plan for 1990 could not be balanced, with a budget deficit of around 15 billion marks ($8.15 billion at the official rate), Modrow said. It was the first time that East Germany has made this figure public.

Prices, heavily subsidised for basic goods until now, should reflect economic reality, he added.

In Bonn, West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel ruled out introducing emergency taxes to help house immigrants from East Germany.

AMMAN EXCHANGE RATES

Saturday November 18, 1989
Central Bank official rates

	Buy	Sell	French franc	102.2	103.2
U.S. dollar	640.0	646.0	Japanese yen (for 100)	443.6	448.0
Pound sterling	1002.5	1012.8	Dutch guilder	308.0	311.1
Deutsche mark	347.8	351.3	Swedish crown	90.3	100.3
Swiss franc	392.2	396.1	Italian lira (for 100)	47.3	47.8
			Belgian franc (for 10)	166.2	167.9

Peanuts

Tyson to fight Douglas in Tokyo

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — James Douglas of Columbus will meet Mike Tyson for the world heavyweight boxing championship Feb. 12 in Tokyo, according to a published report.

Tyson, the undefeated world champion, had been scheduled to meet Razor Ruddock Saturday in Edmonton, Alberta, but withdrew after he came down with a lung infection. That fight was rescheduled for Jan. 20. But Home Box Office, the cable network with television rights, withdrew its support when it could not be assured the fight would come off then.

The Feb. 12 match will be Tyson's next, Al Braverman, director of boxing for promoter Don King, told the Columbus Dispatch in a story in Friday's edition.

"That's the date we're going to go, because the Razor Ruddock fight has been pushed off," he said. "James Douglas is next for Mike Tyson."

Home Box Office intends to telecast the fight, Ross Greenburg of HBO told the Dispatch.

Douglas signed a contract with King in September guaranteeing him a fight with Tyson either in the last quarter of this year or in the first quarter of 1990, the Dispatch said.

"Tokyo doesn't bother me — I'm an international kind of guy," Douglas told the newspaper. "I would fight Mike Tyson anywhere. It's about time we got together."

Douglas, ranked as the No. 2 challenger to Tyson by the International Boxing Federation, nearly faced Tyson once before. He lost to Tony Tucker in an IBF championship fight in May 1987.

Egyptians jubilant over World Cup victory

CAIRO (AP) — Thousands of roaring, dancing young men trilled down Cairo's main streets Friday night, bathing in the luxury of Egypt's first trip to the World Cup soccer championships in 55 years.

Egypt, a middling international soccer power in the 1920s, the decade before the World Cup series began, had just defeated Algeria 1-0 to claim one of two African slots among the 24 teams for the cup tournament next May and June in Rome.

People waved the red, white and black Egyptian flag from the tops of moving automobiles. Street dancers used oversized flags as props for their gyrations. One car had "on to Italy" sprayed on its windshield, a tiny flag flapping back and forth from extended windshield wipers.

Parts of the capital looked more like New Year's Eve in New York's Times Square or London's Piccadilly Circus than a Friday night in a country where virtually any unlicensed demonstration is forbidden in the name of state security.

A measure of the mood was evidenced by Fayed Zommor, head of Egyptian television's sports department, appearing on screen after the game with a weeping coach Mohammed El-Gohary.

"It's the answer to a 55-year dream," Zommor told his viewers during an impromptu speech in which he thanked God, President Hosni Mubarak and assorted other officials for the Egyptian victory.

El-Gohary thanked God too, then attributed the victory to hard work for Egypt and predicted even better in Rome next May and June in the world cup.

Egypt played in the second World Cup, in Naples in 1934, but lost its first game 4-2 to powerhouse Hungary. Before the birth of the World Cup in 1930, Egypt regularly advanced strongly through the Olympic soccer tournaments.

In 1924, the Egyptians embarrassed pre-Olympics favorite Hungary, Egypt in the next games, in 1928. Egypt won its first three games including a 7-0 thrashing of Turkey to reach the Olympics semifinals.

As Friday approached, there appeared to be a feeling in Cairo that those glory days might be approaching again. Celebrations were under way as early as Thursday night, with flag-carrying, horn-blowing car-riders zooming through the streets. The match was the talk of the coffee shops Friday morning.

Mubarak, who passed up the game but sent his two sons in his place, told the players in a telegram he had "followed with gratefulness and appreciation your special performance." He called their effort "this great victory."

The call to afternoon Muslim prayers sounded over television within minutes of the end of the broadcast. The call intoned at the same time from minarets throughout the capital.

Bush congratulates Mubarak

CAIRO (R) — Middle East politics was not the only item on the agenda when U.S. President George Bush telephoned Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak on Saturday. He also congratulated him on Egypt's 1-0 soccer victory over Algeria on Friday. The national Middle East News Agency (MENA) said Bush called Mubarak to discuss Middle East peace diplomacy.

Arsenal goes top, Chelsea draws

LODNON (R) — Champions Arsenal took over the lead in English soccer's first division from fellow-Londoners Chelsea after a 3-0 home victory over Queen's Park Rangers Saturday.

Alan Smith's seventh goal of the season sent Arsenal on their way and Lee Dixon, with a penalty, and substitute Siggi Jonsson added second-half goals to crush last Saturday's conquerors of Liverpool.

Chelsea struck twice in three minutes through Ken Monkou and Kevin Wilson to recover from a two-goal deficit for a 2-2 draw with Southampton and extend an unbeaten run in league matches at home to 27.

With Norwich held to a scoreless draw at home by Charlton and Liverpool playing at Millwall on Sunday, Aston Villa took sole possession of third place with a 4-1 triumph at home to Coventry that included two goals from Ian Ormondroyd.

Scottish premier league leaders Hearts were stung into action by the sending off of Wayne Foster in the 54th minute, scoring three times in the last 20 minutes to beat Motherwell.

Arsenal have 27 points, one more than Chelsea who went behind to two goals by Matthew le Tissier, the first a penalty on the stroke of halftime. Villa have 24 points.

Fourth place on 21 points is shared by Liverpool, Tottenham and Everton, who appeared to be coasting to a 1-0 home win over lowly Wimbledon before Steve Cottrell sneaked an injury-time equalizer.

Tottenham gave £1 million ($1.57-million) goalkeeper Nigel Martyn a tough first division debut with a 3-2 win at Crystal Palace.

The new palace keeper, signed to shore up the worst defence in the first division, conceded goals by David Howells, a Gary Lineker penalty and Vinny Samways, who struck a 76th minute winner after Mark Bright's second goal had levelled the score. Palace have let in 30 goals in 14 league matches.

Manchester United moved into the top half of the table with a 3-1 win at Luton. Danny Wallace and Clayton Blackmore gave United a 2-0 half-time lead and Welsh international striker Mark Hughes sealed their victory after Danny Wilson had pulled one back for the home side.

Dean Saunders stayed top of the scorers list with 11 goals after netting Derby County's second in their 2-0 home victory over bottom club Sheffield Wednesday.

Manchester City, beaten 6-0 by Derby a week ago, hoped the inclusion of new signing Colin Hendry would help bolster their defence. But they crashed 3-0 at home to Nottingham Forest, for whom Nigel Clough found some of his best form to score twice in the opening quarter of an hour, his first goal a penalty.

To compound City's woes, defender Andy Hinchcliffe was sent off near the end for dissent after being booked for a similar offence early in the second half.

Queen's Park Rangers striker Mark Falco was unconscious for at least 10 minutes after a clash of heads with Arsenal captain Tony Adams in the first half. Falco was being kept in hospital overnight under observation.

Glen Donegal and Chris Scott were the toast of minor league clubs Aylesbury and Whitley Bay in the first-round proper of the F.A. cup.

Donegal's 80th-minute goal gave Aylesbury a 1-0 home win to eliminate fourth division leaders Southend. Scott netted at exactly the same time in Whitley Bay's 1-0 triumph at fourth division Scarborough, who in October knocked Chelsea out of the league cup.

In Scotland, Hearts lead the premier league on goal difference as Rangers and Aberdeen also won to stay level with them on 17 points.

Scott Crabbe scored his 12th goal of the season to round off Heart's victory, while Hans Gilhaus scored twice in the opening 16 minutes in Aberdeen's 3-0 win at Dunfermline.

Rangers won 2-0 at bottom-placed Dundee, Mark Walters and Mo Johnston scoring after the break, while arch rivals Celtic suffered their third successive defeat, 1-0 at home to Dundee United who scored through Keir Gallacher in the 77th minute.

DELUXE FIRST FLOOR APARTMENT FOR RENT

3 bedrooms, a big salon and sitting room, a dining room, 3 bathrooms and 2 verandas.

Located between Fourth and Fifth Circles.

For details please call 673366 or 679439.

The Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan Ministry of Public Works and Housing Government Tenders Directorate Invitation for tender No. 51/89/central

The Water Authority of the Ministry of Water and Irrigation through the Government Tenders Directorate/Ministry of Public Works and Housing is soliciting technical and financial proposals from U.S. consulting engineering firms in association with Jordanian consultants for technical and economic feasibility study and final design of the upgrading and expansion of the wastewater stabilisation pond system at As-Samra.

As Samra waste stabilisation pond (WSP) complex is located 40 kilometres north-east of Amman. It treats the sewage of about half the population of Jordan, from those parts of the great Amman Municipality, Zarqa, Ruseifa and other smaller communities. The ponds are designed in three parallel trains. In each train there are two anaerobic ponds, four facultative ponds and four maturation ponds. The objectives of this study are: to review the design and the operating results of the WSP system, to assess the environmental effects of the system, to recommend and existing improvements to increase the efficiency of the existing ponds and to design additional treatment capacity to serve the needs of the present and future connected area to the year 2005. USAID/Jordan will finance the required study under TSFS V Project (278-0266).

Potential U.S. consulting firms associated with Jordanian consultants, may obtain the terms of reference from Mr. Abraham Grayson, Chief Engineer AID/W, ANE, PD/ENGR, Room No. 3321A, Telephone No. (202)647-8094, Washington D.C., 20523, or from the Tenders Division, Water Authority, P.O. Box 2412, Amman, Jordan, Tel.: 680100.

The technical and the financial proposals shall be submitted to the Director, Government Tenders Directorate, Ministry of Public Works and Housing, P.O. Box 1220, Amman, Jordan, Tel.: 668481, Telex 21944 MPW JO. Submittal and proposals shall not be later than 13:30 of Saturday, January 6, 1990.

Director/ Government Tenders Directorate
Chairman of the Central Tenders Committee
Eng. Salem Qudah

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1989 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

WITH A LITTLE BIT OF CARE

Both vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
A 43
Q 10 8 6 2
K 7 6 3
EAST
Q J 10 8 5
9 8
K 4
Q J 5 4
SOUTH
K 6 4
A K Q 5 2
9 5
9 8 2

The bidding:
South West North East
1 Pass 2 Pass
2 Pass 3 Pass
3 NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠
The dual between a skilled defender and a brilliant declarer can be a joy forever. This hand is one of rare beauty.

North-South bid well to the only game that stood a chance. Note North had no second thoughts about rebidding clubs—when partner was unable to raise, he was happy to play for a nine-trick contract.

Had dummy held one more spade, life would have been easy. As it was, West's opening lead removed a key dummy entry. At trick two declarer cashed the king of clubs and, when East dropped the ten, made the excellent unblock of the eight from hand. Next came a low club from dummy to the nine, and it was West's turn to star. Realizing that winning the club would be futile since his remaining honor could be finessed, West allowed the nine to hold.

Now declarer switched horses. Since there were three club tricks and two spades in the bank, he needed only four tricks from hearts to bring his total to nine. To make sure that he did not muddle his entries should that suit split 4-2, declarer continued with a low heart from hand.

This far-sighted series of plays left the defenders helpless. The best they could do, no matter how they defended, was to take four tricks. At the table, West won the heart and another. East took two tricks in the suit and declarer claimed the balance.

THE Daily Crossword by Dorothy B. Marsh

ACROSS
1 Yeggs' targets
6 Convergences
10 FBI's mother
14 Abandon native
15 Sheltered
16 Trudge
17 Take it easy
18 Lighthearted
20 Nav. off.
21 Waste allowance
23 Thrust
24 H-fis
25 Martie
27 Poetic time
28 Algonquian
30 Split
31 Cherry
35 Globe
37 "Tail" from
38 Before DDE
39 Slam visitor
40 Oceanic abbr.
41 Casual
42 Unlucky
43 Hockey notable
46 Roof edge
48 Colorful book
50 Alan Ladd role
52 Casapool
56 RSTP word
57 Effervescent
59 Excite joy in
61 Tow
62 Director Kazan
63 Did a lawn
64 Ostentatious
65 Engrossed
66 Long time

DOWN
2 "We air?"
3 Quiz answer
4 Sp. guess
5 Sweet age?
6 Grooves
7 Landed
8 Accelerate
9 Linear's route
10 Small upright
11 Sleep like —
12 Libretto
13 Lures for buyers
16 God of love
22 Barrett or Jaffe
25 Diamond club
26 Magna —
28 Wine sisters
29 Mrs. Charles, Chaplin
30 Vases
31 Gazette of Tibet
32 Swear words?
33 Sooner state: able
34 "— Foolish Things"
36 Inlet
39 Xaver
41 Be at the side
42 Marrymaker
43 Standard
44 Window cover
46 Nacreous
48 Bandleader
49 Xaver
50 Honesty city
51 Gunpowder
52 Ingredient
53 Inlet
54 Sentry's order
55 Cut
57 Resort
58 Stevedores'
59 Sp.
60 New Guinea port

Saturday's Puzzle Solver:

DOWN
1 Yeggs' targets
6 Convergences
10 FBI's mother
14 Abandon native
15 Sheltered
16 Trudge
17 Take it easy
18 Lighthearted
20 Nav. off.
21 Waste allowance
23 Thrust
24 H-fis
25 Martie
27 Poetic time
28 Algonquian
30 Split
31 Cherry
35 Globe
37 "Tail" from
38 Before DDE
39 Slam visitor
40 Oceanic abbr.
41 Casual
42 Unlucky
43 Hockey notable
46 Roof edge
48 Colorful book
50 Alan Ladd role
52 Casapool
56 RSTP word
57 Effervescent
59 Excite joy in
61 Tow
62 Director Kazan
63 Did a lawn
64 Ostentatious
65 Engrossed
66 Long time

MANY VILLAS AND APARTMENTS FOR RENT & SALE Furnished or Unfurnished

In Shmeisani, Sweifish, Abdoun and many other locations.

For more information please call Wael Real Estate
Tel: 685342, 681787

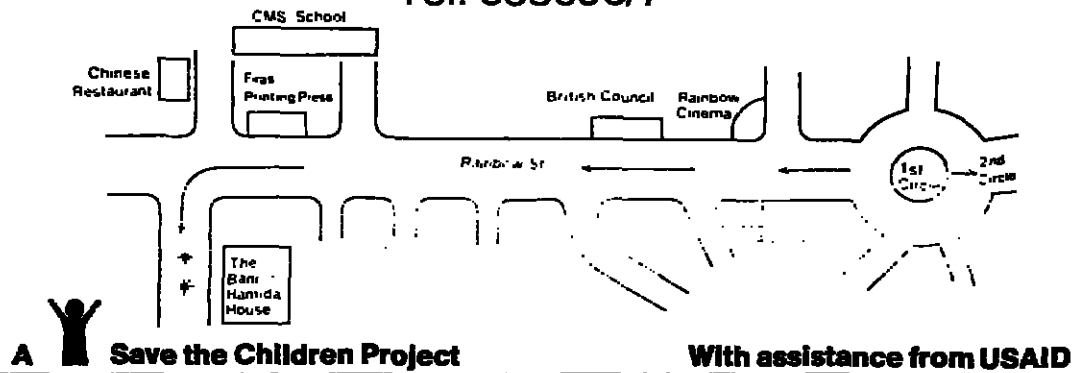

Cinema Tel: 625155
RAINBOW
FATAL ATTRACTION
Performances: 3:30, 6:30, 8:30 p.m.

Cinema Tel: 677420
CONCORD
Noor Al Sharif, Maali Zayed
in
EXECUTION BATTALION
Performances: 3:30, 6:00, 8:30, 10:30

Cinema Tel: 634144
PHILADELPHIA
STAR MAN
Performances: 3:30, 6:00, 8:30, 10:30 p.m.

ANNOUNCING The Grand Opening Exhibition for The Bani Hamida House

On Sunday Nov. 19 1 pm - 7 pm
Monday thru Friday Nov. 20-24 8 am - 7 pm
At Jabal Amman, Rainbow St.
Tel: 658696/7

SPORTS IN BRIEF

SWIMMING STAR TO LEAVE EAST GERMANY: Kornelia Ender, one of East Germany's greatest swimmers, has decided to move to the West, the official East German news agency ADN said Friday. Ender, now Kornelia Grummt after marriage to former world bobsleigh champion and decathlete Steffen Grummt, won a total of four gold and four silver medals at the 1972 and 1976 Olympics. ADN said the couple gave personal reasons for their decision to leave. Ender was just 13 when she claimed the 200 metres individual medley silver and two relay silvers at the 1972 Munich games. Four years later in Montreal she won two gold medals inside half an hour in the 100 butterfly and 200 freestyle, equalling the world record in the first race and breaking it in the second. She also took golds in the 100 freestyle and medley relay.

CHANG BEATS CONNORS: David Chang overcame a 6-1, 6-3, 6-4 first-set loss and rallied to win the last two sets, 6-3, 6-4, to defeat Jimmy Connors in an exhibition match at the Aetna tennis classic in Hartford, Connecticut. Connors, using an aggressive style of play, jumped to an early 5-0 lead in the first of Thursday night's sets before Chang won a game. Chang, however, came back in the second set, winning the first two games. In the third set, Chang was in control throughout. Connors made a late rally and drew to within 5-4, but Chang captured the final game to win.

CUBA UPSETS U.S. OLYMPIC CHAMPIONS: The United States and Soviet Union, Olympic gold and silver medalists, lost to Cuba and Italy respectively in the men's volleyball world cup in Osaka on Saturday. Cuba, who boycotted the Seoul games, won 15-8, 15-12, 15-11. European champions Italy, ninth at the Olympics, overcame the Soviets 15-8, 15-12, 15-7. Explosive spikes, powerful back attacks and high blocks, led by Cuban attacker Joel Despaigue, gave Cuba command from the first set. Although the U.S. fought back with some powerful services and led 11-9 in the third set, they never looked likely to win. Cuban head coach Orlando Samuels said: "We have been playing with the same members for the last two years while the U.S. had to rebuild their team after winning the Olympics."

FIFA ANNULS WORLD CUP QUALIFIERS AGAINST GUATEMALA: The International Federation of Football Associations Friday annulled the two World Cup qualifiers between El Salvador and Guatemala because of the turmoil in El Salvador. A statement from the world soccer authority said a FIFA organising committee would decide on the scoring of the matches at a later date. FIFA spokesman Guido Tognioni said the bitter fighting in San Salvador made it impossible for El Salvador players to travel to the matches, which had been scheduled for Nov. 19 and 21 in Guatemala.

VIRUS ELIMINATES OLYMPIC SWIMMER: Olympic swimming gold medalist Duncan Armstrong will miss the Commonwealth games in January because of an illness. The Australian said Friday he will take a four-month break from swimming to recover from a virus. He did not say what virus he was suffering from, but Australian television network Channel Nine said it was glandular fever. Armstrong, who earlier this month married American swimmer Tami Bruce, said he will return to competition in the new year in preparation for the 1991 world championships, which are scheduled for Perth in western Australia.

POLISH BOXER BANNED FOR ONE YEAR: Polish boxer Dariusz Czemiel, who won a silver medal at the European championships in June, has been banned from competing for a year by Polish boxing authorities for using the banned anabolic steroid testosterone.

CONGRATULATIONS

to the Abdul Hamid Sharaf student
Nadine Iyad Usta

For winning First Prize in the SOS card contest for His Majesty's birthday

"ROLAN" ELECTROMECHANICAL GROUP
We are professionals in:
1- Repairing & fixing central heating and maintenance
2- Fixing & repairing all electrical appliances.
3- Irrigation systems for gardens and others.
4- All sorts of maintenance, cleaning items and house finishing
Quick service is our symbol.
Pis. contact (610544) for reservation

FOR SALE FOREIGNER LEAVING
Furniture and household goods for sale.
Tel: 818374

RESEARCH ASSISTANT OPPORTUNITIES

The Private Services Development Project will be selecting a Jordanian Research Assistant for immediate employment.
The candidate should have:
1. Good command of oral and written English.
2. Computer skills.
3. Library and community research experience.
4. University degree in Business is preferred.

The salary is JD 220/month
Please submit C.V. to the Administrative Manager
P.O. Box 830348 Amman.
And must include salary history and references.

Cinema Tel: 675571
NIJOUN
Performances: 3:30, 6:15, 8:30, 10:30

Cinema Tel: 677420
PLAZA
CROCODILE DUNDEE Part II
Performances: 12:30, 3:30, 6:30, 9:30

Salvadoran soldiers prepare to enter combat against the rebels in San Salvador

Fighting slows in Salvadorean capital

SAN SALVADOR (Agencies) — Fighting in El Salvador's leftist guerrilla offensive has slowed as rebels shifted to new positions in areas they had occupied in the north and east of the capital.

As sporadic shooting continued on the offensive's sixth day, a British journalist was killed by a single shot, another victim of battles that have probably claimed well over 1,000 lives this week.

U.S. Ambassador William Walker told reporters that the latest casualty figures he had from military sources were 208 soldiers dead and 627 wounded, with 676 guerrilla fatalities and 322 wounded.

"I would suspect that when full control has been regained we are going to find a lot of civilians that are wounded and killed," he said.

"The figures will be high." In Washington, meanwhile, a high State Department official and liberal senators suggested that the murder of six priests in El Salvador was the work of right-wing death squads and called on the government to find the killers.

Appearing before a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee, Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson referred to the rebel offensive and said: "The terror of the FMLN (Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front) is no excuse for the terror of the violent right."

Six Jesuit priests, including Ignacio Ellacuria, rector of the University of Central America, were slain Thursday at the campus. Also killed were the wife and 15-year-old daughter of a university employee.

The Catholic Church meanwhile called for an immediate ceasefire, which the Auxiliary Bishop of San Salvador, Gregorio Rosa Chavez, said the FMLN guerrillas had accepted.

Rosa Chavez added that the response from the rightist government of President Alfredo Cristiani was more equivocal.

Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas reported hearing near a military headquarters a voice over a loudspeaker gloating over the priests' death and saying "We will continue killing Communists."

Diplomatic sources said most of the 12 foreign Lutherans detained Thursday night had been freed and would be deported Saturday. Police gave no reason for the arrests.

Walker reported pockets of guerrilla resistance north and east of the capital, and although the rebels had shifted positions, the military situation remained largely unchanged.

"They take positions, we take them back, but we remain strong," guerrilla commander Francisco Guardado told reporters in the northern suburb of Mecicanos.

The fighting was much less intense and there were very few aerial attacks on rebel positions in San Salvador Friday.

A military analyst said this could be due to the shortage of readily identifiable targets and the public outcry about civilian casualties in the aerial offensive. But sporadic shooting continued, and in one incident David Blundy, 44, the Washington-based correspondent of the London Sunday Correspondent, was hit by a single bullet in Mecicanos.

Outside the capital, fighting also appeared to slow.

In the eastern city of San Miguel, where local military commander Colonel Mauricio Vargas told Reuters 37 soldiers and 183 guerrillas had been killed, rebels were entrenched in suburbs but residents said fighting had died down Friday.

And in Zacatecoluca, a central Salvadorean city which has seen heavy fighting over the week, residents said the situation was quieter despite sporadic aerial attacks.

A U.S. general who drafted a military strategy for El Salvador said Friday the guerrillas cannot be defeated on the battlefield and that the war drags on because of corruption in the U.S.-backed government.

Gen. Fred Woerner also said Thursday's killings of six Roman Catholic priests in San Salvador most likely was the work of the radical right wing acting without the support or tacit consent of the conservative government.

The general, who retired two weeks ago as head of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, wrote the 1981 Woerner Report to outline a classified military strategy for poorly trained Salvadorean Armed Forces battling leftist guerrillas since 1979.

That report, still classified, called for U.S. military advisers, increased forces, large deliveries of weaponry and economic aid to bolster the battered infrastructure.

Romania appeals to Peking for support

PEKING (R) — Romania's hard-line President Nicolae Ceausescu, increasingly isolated as reforms sweep Eastern Europe, has made a direct plea to Peking to join his country's crusade to preserve Communism.

In an interview published in the Chinese Communist Party newspaper People's Daily Saturday, Ceausescu said: "We are extremely concerned about developing cooperation with the Chinese Communist Party and people."

"The two countries must make initiatives to resolve all kinds of current difficulties which would be beneficial to the development of socialism in the two nations and other countries."

Ceausescu did not spell out the initiatives but said they would mean interfering in the internal affairs of other countries.

"He described the international situation as 'grim' and 'complex'."

"Now more than ever before there is a greater need for cooperation between Communist Parties and Socialist countries," Ceausescu said.

The 71-year-old leader, who has ruled Romania with an iron grip since 1965, did not refer directly to reforms changing Hungary, Poland, East Germany and, most recently, Bulgaria.

"It's clear what he means," an East European diplomat in Peking commented. "Romania is the last bastion," he said, noting that anti-Ceausescu protests have broken out in Eastern Europe outside Romania.

Diplomats said Ceausescu had made similar calls for Communist unity before but his latest attempt was significant because of his direct appeal to China to join Romania in its self-proclaimed crusade to preserve Communism.

Ceausescu has long maintained close ties with China and acted as go-between in the early stages of rapprochement between Peking and the Soviet Union.

Border restrictions

Meanwhile a Hungarian border guard spokesman said Saturday Romania is restricting the entry of travellers from neighbouring Hungary although the border officially remains open.

Hungarian radio reported Friday that Romania had sealed its border with Hungary, possibly in connection with a congress of the Romanian Communist Party scheduled to start Monday.

"It is just a rumour that the borders have been closed by the Romanians," Lieutenant-Colonel Laszlo Fenyo told Reuters.

But he added: "They have refused some people entry to the country in the past but never to such a large extent as since yesterday afternoon."

Three quarters of all cars and more than 40 per cent of all travellers seeking to enter Romania through its five crossing points with Hungary were barred in the 12 hours to 0500 GMT Saturday, he said.

The measures affected West Germans, Yugoslavs and Poles as well as Hungarians and were still in force.

Romania's move highlights its increasing isolation within an Eastern Europe being swept elsewhere by reform.

Relations between hardline Romania and reformist Hungary are strained because of criticism by Budapest of Romania's treatment of more than two million ethnic Hungarians, many in the former Hungarian territory of Transylvania.

92 killed in Yugoslav mine fire

BELGRADE (R) — Ninety-two coal miners were killed in one of Yugoslavia's worst pit disasters and four people have been arrested in connection with the tragedy.

A fire broke out in the Aleksinac Coal Mine, in the Republic of Serbia, 200 kilometres south of Belgrade, Friday, trapping about 100 miners, Tanjug News Agency said.

It quoted Serbian Interior Minister Radomir Bogdanovic as saying Saturday that four miners have been arrested in connection with the fire and that an investigation would determine who was responsible for it.

"There hasn't been even a theoretical chance to save the miners," Bogdanovic said.

He declined to give the names of the four arrested, saying it was "in the interest of investigation."

Mine director Stanislav Mandusic said Friday the fire may have been caused by welding works in a tunnel.

Rescue teams from all over Serbia and neighbouring Bosnia arrived to try to bring the fire under control but Bogdanovic said it may burn for another 30 hours.

The government has proclaimed a day of mourning and offers of help for the miners' families were pouring in from all over the country, Tanjug said.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, Communist Party chief Bogdan Trifunovic and other officials have visited the scene.

Milosevic said "the greatest tragedy" had occurred. "Human lives cannot be compensated."

Television showed miners who had survived, their white helmets and faces blackened by coal dust and smoke.

"It is impossible to describe the scene," one miner said. "The fire broke out all of a sudden and 100 of our colleagues were trapped behind in the blaze."

The mining area in central Serbia has been the scene of several disasters.

Thirty-seven miners and a West German engineer were killed in a gas explosion in the Aleksinac Mine in June 1983.

Thirty-three more were killed in April 1984 in an explosion in Resavica Coal Mine, 70 kilometres south west of Aleksinac.

Yugoslavia's worst mining disaster happened in 1975 in Kakanj Coal Mine in the central republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina, when 108 miners died.

Dubcek detained during Prague protest

PRAGUE (R) — Ousted Czechoslovak Communist Party leader Alexander Dubcek was among those detained during Friday's pro-democracy demonstration with an estimated 50,000 people, a colleague said Saturday.

Vaclav Slavik said Dubcek, cast into political oblivion after the 1968 Soviet-led invasion crushed his "Prague spring" reform movement, was released after three hours of questioning.

Dubcek attended the officially authorised part of Friday's demonstration at Charles University with Slavik, who served as party Central Committee secretary in 1968.

Uniformed and plainclothes police surrounded Dubcek when demonstrators began asking him autographs, Slavik told Reuters.

Slavik, his wife, and leading Italian Communist Party member Luigi Colajanni were detained for 10 minutes but then released.

Dubcek, 68, has lived in official imposed obscurity since his overthrow but has openly criticised the hardline authorities in the past two years.

Police and troops used batons to break up the march through central Prague by 50,000 people demanding an end to Communist rule.

The biggest anti-government protest in Czechoslovakia for 20 years disintegrated under the batons of riot police and para-troopers Friday night after the hardline leadership vowed again to resist the tide of change surging through Eastern Europe.

Witnesses saw at least 100 people detained. Several were badly hurt when the security forces — some with unarmoured dogs — beat hundreds of demonstrators at the head of the column trying to reach symbolic Wenceslas Square.

A correspondent for the British newspaper the Independent was among those beaten as the five-hour protest ended in a brawl.

The demonstrators demanded the overthrow of Communist Party chief Milos Jakes and called for an open dialogue with their orthodox rulers to chart the future course of the country.

"Dialogue, dialogue," "We don't want the Communist Party," "forty years are enough" and "Jakes, this is your end," they shouted.

Most of the marchers were students. They carried national flags or banners proclaiming "freedom" and "stop beating students."

The march — officially sanctioned — was held to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Nazi German suppression of anti-fascist protests which resulted in the closure of universities.

As the marchers streamed among the bank of the River Vltava towards Wenceslas Square the security forces waded into the head of the column and the demonstrators began to flee.

Estonians compromise on election law

MOSCOW (AP) — Estonia's parliament has compromised on an election law that triggered nine days of strikes by ethnic Russians who feared stringent residency requirements would deprive them of the right to vote.

The new law requires a 10-year residency in Estonia for holding public office, but deletes a two-year residency requirement for the right to vote. Soviet News Agency (TASS) said.

The compromise legislation passed with 186 votes in favour, and 40 abstentions by the "equal rights" group of deputies, according to the TASS. It did not say if anyone voted against the bill.

In August, tens of thousands of Russians and other non-Estonian residents of the Baltic republic walked off their jobs to protest a new law requiring two years of residence in Estonia to vote.

The national presidium subsequently called the law unconstitutional, but the Estonian parliament, in an act of defiance, only suspended the law's provisions for the local elections set for Dec. 10.

Meanwhile Kremlin officials warned Lithuanian Communists against going too far in bids for more independence for their republic and their party, members of the Baltic republic's party said Friday.

Bulgarians demand free polls

SOFIA (R) — Fifty thousand Bulgarians crammed into central Sofia Saturday shouting for free elections and the trial for corruption of ousted hardline leader Todor Zhivkov.

The demonstration, Bulgaria's largest independent rally in 40 years of Communist rule, took place only a day after the new reformist Communist Party chief Petar Mladenov replaced Zhivkov as president and said he supported free elections.

The cheering, clapping crowd which packed the central Alexander Nevski Square waved hundreds of banners demanding Soviet-style reform and depicting the disgraced Zhivkov as Adolf Hitler and behind prison bars.

Police did not intervene.

The rally, staged by the country's growing independent groups, was the latest surge in a tide of change sweeping into Bulgaria from other parts of Eastern Europe. Zhivkov was toppled after 35 years in power.

"We want freedom of speech, freedom of thought, and free elections" dissident Petko Simenov shouted, leading the chants of an ecstatic crowd from the steps of Nevski Cathedral.

"Todor Zhivkov must be put on trial." During Zhivkov's last years in power Bulgaria, the smallest state in the Warsaw Pact with nine million people, had gone into an economic dive with widespread shortages, large foreign debts and an energy crisis.

Zhivkov ran a police state, ruthlessly suppressing political dissenters and ethnic minorities.

He paid only lip service to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's "perestroika" reform drive and Mladenov, 53, is moving fast to consolidate power and turn the country around.

Mladenov purged the party of top conservatives Thursday and presided over a shake-up of the government Friday while also allowing an amnesty for jailed political dissidents.

He told French television after Friday's parliament session that he favoured free elections and an end to travel curbs.

"What has happened here has torn a gaping hole in a regime of fear," leading dissident Konstantin Trenchev told Reuters at the rally. "It is a hole that can never be repaired."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Pope-Gorbachev meeting confirmed

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican has confirmed that Pope John Paul II will meet with Mikhail Gorbachev on Dec. 1 and called it an "official" visit, a sign of the importance the Vatican attaches to it. The meeting will be the first between the head of the Roman Catholic Church and the president of the Soviet Union. Gorbachev will visit the Vatican during a three-day trip to Italy and a day before he holds talks with U.S. President George Bush off Malta. The Vatican gave no details on the meeting. The confirmation was actually contained in a brief notice on media arrangements. Official visits often include an exchange of speeches as well as private talks and a tour of St. Peter's Basilica and the Vatican Museum.

Monaco denies abdication report

MONACO (R) — The Principality of Monaco has denied reports that Prince Rainier III was planning to abdicate any day now in favour of his son, Prince Albert. "The claim is formally denied," palace press officer Mireille Rebaudo told Reuters following a report by the Paris-Match magazine that Rainier could end his 40-year-reign over the tiny Mediterranean state this weekend. "Thank heaven, the prince is in excellent health, as everyone will see on Sunday," she said. Paris-Match, a close watcher of Monaco's royals, said in its latest edition Friday that the abdication could be announced during National Day celebrations this weekend or, at the latest, "by the end of the year." The 66-year-old prince, still mourning the 1982 death of his wife, Grace Kelly, was tired of the daily routine of palace officialdom and believed Albert at 31 had now been sufficiently groomed to rule over Monaco's 5,000 subjects, the weekly said.

Spanish officer killed in Madrid

MADRID (R) — Suspected Basque separatist gunmen killed a Spanish army officer and seriously wounded his driver in an attack on their car in central Madrid, an interior ministry official has said. Lieutenant-Colonel Jose Martinez Moreno, a 51-year-old bachelor, died instantly and his driver Alfonso Cobertera Zurita, 20, was hit in the neck. Witnesses said two young men sprang out of a car stopped at a traffic light near Atocha Railway Station, sprayed the officer's car with automatic rifle fire and drove off. Zurita was rushed to hospital where a spokesman said he appeared to be out of danger. The Interior Ministry spokesman said it suspected the gunmen were ETA (Basque Homeland and Freedom) separatists.

Zairean president due in Angola

LISBON (R) — Zairean President Mobutu Sese Seko, the main mediator in Angola's civil war, is due in Luanda Saturday to present rebel plans for a ceasefire, the Portuguese News Agency LUSA reported. Quoting official sources in the Angolan capital, LUSA said Mobutu would brief President Jose Eduardo Dos Santos on the conditions set by the UNITA rebels before they will sign a ceasefire leading to a permanent peace plan. The agency also quoted informed sources as saying Angola's government may drop its demand that rebel leader Jonas Savimbi go into exile in return for a pledge that the guerrillas quickly accept integration into the Angolan army. Both sides agreed to a truce in the 14-year-old war last June but fighting resumed after only two months amid rebel charges that the terms of the accord had been distorted.

COLUMN

Gielgud honoured

LONDON (AP) — Actor Sir John Gielgud paid tribute to the "exquisite beauty" of Princess Diana as she presided over his installation as the First Honorary Fellow of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. The princess, whose husband Prince Charles is heir to the throne, is president of the prestigious drama school, and leading actors including Susanah York and Sir Richard Attenborough were on hand for the ceremony, along with present-day students. "My career has been marvellously lucky. I only hope that many of you will succeed as I have been lucky enough to do," said Gielgud. Gielgud entered the academy on a scholarship in 1922 and was its president until his 85th birthday earlier this year. Princess Diana, 28, succeeded him. "I was a very bad president," Gielgud told the audience. Attenborough, chairman of the academy's council, described him as "in truth one of the greatest actors of all time." Gielgud referred to the two new appointments — himself as fellow and she as president — as "venerability and wisdom" on one hand and "youth and exquisite beauty," on the other.

Batman wins votes in Brazil poll

RIO DE JANEIRO (R) — Batman and a monkey in Rio's zoo won votes in Brazil's first presidential election in 29 years, election officials said. Batman and the monkey's name were written in protest on the official voting form listing the 21 real candidates, they said. In a more surprising protest, officials in a Rio polling station said they found a Marijuana cigarette stuck to a voting form with tape in Wednesday's vote. Other voters had written messages, prayers and even poems to their candidates or put money in the ballot boxes. Apart from Brazil's return to democracy after more than two decades of military rule, some voters in Rio had another cause to celebrate on Thursday. O Dia newspaper reported Rio's illegal but tolerated numbers game decided to bet on the total number of votes counted by Thursday.

THE Sunday Crossword

Edited by Herb Etemson

FELLOWSHIP

William Cassin

ACROSS
1 Network letters
2 Col. in
3 Partially
4 Knocks
5 Infection
6 "Shoppies"
7 Lad's creator
8 Indian city
9 Aunt Betsy
10 Trueblood's
11 name
12 Encounter
13 Fan
14 Undergarment
15 Raincoat
16 Raincoat
17 Raincoat
18 Raincoat
19 Raincoat
20 Raincoat

DOWN
1 Writer's
2 Name
3 Dispersal
4 (epitaph)
5 Prepared anew
6 Amidas
7 film
8 entrance
9 "Time and"
10 Target for Ness
11 Copy
12 Women
13 Clattered
14 "The - Love"
15 "Polar Part"
16 Lady
17 Complete
18 Woodland
19 Pictur
20 Heriberto

Diagramless

19819, Craig Schiller

ACROSS
1 Game on
2 Inventor's
3 monogram
4 Level of tennis
5 Sacred song
6 Stadium sound
7 Westchester
12 Farmers
19 Hurray in 20 Endure longer

DOWN
14 Surrounding
15 Acquis
16 Photed
17 61
18 Melancholy
22 Dated
23 Sharp-tasting
24 Hiss
25 Cooled
26 Sack, go
27 Discrep signal
28 Also
29 Apply with 30 motion

31 Glorified
32 Wind instrument
33 Plank
34 Touch lightly
35 Everything
36 monogram
37 Switch words
38 Afternoon
39 social
40 Heavenly
41 regions
42 Dye-in-the-

39 Call for 40 attention
41 Farmers are 42 Observe
43 Sicilian volcano
44 Long period
45 Go all - tacki
46 Army go
47 Crying
48 Take a snooze
49 - Mahal
50 Dulle
51 Dulle

52 Strong point
53 Fracture
54 Field machine
55 Rusted
56 More shipshape
57 Very cheap
58 Egg
59 Ump's relative
60 Captain or
61 Go astray
62 Spelling -

59 You, now
60 Matched
61 collection
62 101 IRS men?
63 102 Aunt Polly?
64 103
65 104
66 105
67 106
68 107
69 108
70 109
71 110
72 111
73 112
74 113
75 114
76 115
77 116
78 117
79 118
80 119
81 120
82 121
83 122

84 Insipid
85 Little
86 Piffing
87 Plucker Warren's
88 Gloomy
89 100
90 Fr. head
91 "Loo-la"
92 "That's an Irish
93 Murphy or
94 Murry
95 104
96 105
97 106
98 107
99 108
100 109
101 110
102 111
103 112
104 113
105 114
106 115
107 116
108 117
109 118
110 119
111 120
112 121
113 122

114 Prepared for a
115 121
116 122

117 Title of radio
118 119
119 120
120 121
121 122

122 Muscular Paul

Last Week's Cryptograms

- Cool empire calls charging runner out at plate in close home game.
- Yukon picolo player who reaches crescendo too soon, tersely told to pipe down!
- Government outlawed out-dated coal-burning locomotive with a tender behind.
- Exuberant ballerina outspins partner to end pas de deux solo.

CRYPTOGRAMS

- 15 WEE FREE-AS-IS ORSOER VYUR AS AND
URND YWNI AS IS FREE? —By Lois H. Jones
- 2 QXNZ KOUENDPM HOPPEPN UM ZDCKPDQ
KIDSR ROCKENN'S NC KIDSHOPPER. —By Barbara J. Ragg
- 3 AL XOVIBEM FWERGX FC OMVEXERF QBFX
QWC IER PSFETSMML AEGV MBTV MVXX
PSMM. —By Gordon Miller
- 4 UDEW DTTYW UP ISIGNOCAP NODRW
LDENCODY KOAP DIYODL UKKUP BYNGD
TKY SKEW NOTDYKNY NOWDYKNY. —By Ed Haddleton

